Britain Assured Duce Won't Take Land From Spain

Chamberlain Reveals Mussolini's Pledge; Critics in Commons Likely to Be Skeptical

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 16.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, back at work in Downing street after his talks with Premier Mussolini, today allowed it to be known that, contrary to reports, he did not come back altogether empty-handed from his visit to Rome.

What Chamberlain brought back was a specific pledge from Mussolini that he has no territorial designs on Spain, Spanish Morocco or the Balearic Islands, even if a grateful Gen. Franco were to force it upon him, in payment for all the Italian men, money and machines donated to his cause.

Opposition Skepticism Likely

When Parliament reconvenes on January 31 labor and liberal leaders will immediately begin probing into the prime minister's trip. To offset any criticism, Mussolini has authorized Chamberlain to say Mussolini won't have any part of Spain, not for keeps anyway, come what may.

The debate will then proceed to the question of how much value should be attached to the Italian pledge to preserve Spain for the Spaniards. The pledge that has just passed from Mussolini to Chamberlain was first given in the early days of the Spanish war, and was put in writing in the Anglo-Italian agreement of last Easter.

All the time Italy has maintained a strangle hold on the Balearic Islands, from which her bombers have sallied forth to raid Barcelona, Valencia and lesser ports. At this moment Italian troops are dangerously close to Barcelona and the French frontier. In Spanish Morocco Italian and German technicians are reported increasingly active.

Hopes to Quiet France

Mussolini's renewal of his 2-year-old pledge is planned to offset the growing agitation in France to discard its frontier control and send men and material to defend Barcelona.

If Mussolini's pledge can be accepted at its face value, France would be relieved somewhat of her fear that Mussolini's strategy is to cut her off from her reservoirs of dark manpower in French Morocco. Britain, too, would be relieved of the menace presented to her Mediterranean communications and her Gibraltar outpost, as long as Italy and Germany are powerful in the Balearics, Morocco or Spain proper.

Chamberlain can argue that Mussolini has not broken his pledge thus far, as the pledge does not become operative until the war is over. When and if the war ends, Chamberlain will discover whether the Anglo-Italian accord is a scrap of paper.

"Will Never Cede An Inch"

Spain will never cede an inch of its territory to any foreign power, according to Franco's diplomatic agent in London, the Duke of Alba, who said:

"Spain has only once been conquered in its long history, and that was by the Romans. It took 200 years to do so and they were unable to hold it."

Franco Appeals For Barcelona's Surrender as His Troops Sweep On

By the Associated Press

Hendaye, France, Jan. 16.—As three Spanish insurgent armies closed in on Barcelona tonight after a day of continued advances, Gen. Francisco Franco appealed by radio to loyalist Spain to lay down its arms. He said the insurgents were marching on Barcelona "not to destroy her but to save her."

The London Daily Mail reported, meanwhile, that loyalist Premier Negrin had left Barcelona on a secret visit to Paris to urge the French government to open its frontiers for movement of arms to his hard-pressed forces.

Offers "Peace and Pardon"

"The utmost secrecy is being observed concerning his movements," the newspaper said.

Franco offered "peace and pardon" to those whom he said had been deceived into fighting for the government cause, if they would surrender.

Talk of German or Italian domination of Spain after an insurgent victory he termed in effect a "farce."

He asserted that after the end of the war Spain would resist, with the same courage as that of his troops now fighting the government, any attempt by foreign powers to infringe upon Spain's territorial integrity.

Igualda Shelled

Hendaye, France, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Gen. Franco's Italian and Navarrese insurgents poured shells today into the fortified outpost of Igualda, only 28 miles inland from Barcelona. They had previously cut the Barcelona-Lerida highway on the outskirts, while another insurgent column pounded up the Mediterranean coast to the government's fortified line above the Gaya River, 46 miles below Barcelona.

The defenders of Barcelona, fearing entrapment by a quick enemy thrust to the seacoast north of the Gaya River, fell back under orders of the high command to their steel and concrete defenses encircling Barcelona for a "last ditch" stand outside the capital.

Gen. Juan Yague, commander of Franco's Moroccan troops in the Southern Catalonian sector, said loyalists were abandoning town after town without a fight and the insurgents might be able to enter Barcelona within two weeks.

Calls Enemy "Rabble"

"The enemy's army has become virtually a rabble, with the exception of isolated units such as the assault guards," Yague said.

Franco's crack Navarrese veterans struck north from the conquered loyalist seaport of Tarragona, which fell almost without a shot being fired, and took the towns of Secuita and Villavella as they

Barcelona Tense, But Children Still Make Mud Pies

Barcelona, Jan. 16 (AP).—Two patrons of a little shooting gallery in Barcelona plugged away at china ducks and drakes today as the insurgent war machine moved steadily toward their city.

They typified the capital's citizens as reports of enemy successes poured in. In most of the city men dozed against walls and children made mud pies, but there was a perceptible undercurrent of tenseness.

Elliott Roosevelt Forecasts Texan In White House

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, said in a transcribed radio address tonight the time will come soon for a Texan to be elected President of the United States, and mentioned Vice President Garner and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as outstanding Texans.

He made no specific nominations and specified no particular time.

Ellen Maki Receives Post Cup As Ideal Civil Service Employe

ELLEN MAKI

Postal Savings Unit Supervisor Was Last Minute Entry; Rated First in Feminine Efficiency

By Scott Hart

Miss Ellen Maki, a tall blond girl in a flowing white silk dress and silver slippers, last night walked to the platform of the Departmental Auditorium and received The Post Cup as the ideal feminine civil service employe in this Federal town of more than 119,000 Government employes.

She received the applause of an auditorium full of Government employes who were celebrating the opening of National Civil Service Week, and who had just been told by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, that democracy cannot survive without a government that opens its employment gates to all without favor.

After Miss Maki got the cup and a bouquet of flaming roses, a long line of people walked by and shook her hand. She recalled, a short while later, that she hardly knew her name had been entered in the campaign The Post undertook to find the ideal feminine employe.

Entered at Last Minute

It was a matter of her name being sent in, almost at the last minute, by her friends in the Post-office Department. And then, when Miss Maki was called before the judges last Saturday, she had forgotten the important thing to the selection—what her efficiency ratings were.

The judges found that in her division she had the highest efficiency rating that is given. They discovered also:

That she was born in Duluth, Minn., and was graduated from the Central High School there as an honor student. She spent a year in the Duluth Business University; traveled throughout the United States and Europe; began her career in the division of postal savings as a junior stenographer; was advanced to clerk-stenographer, then

Douglas Hits At Richberg in Giannini Case

Charges Bank Counsel Tries to Start Trouble In Government Ranks

Donald R. Richberg, former head of the National Recovery Administration and chief counsel for the Giannini-controlled Transamerica Corporation, yesterday was accused by Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission of trying to stir up a row between the commission and Federal banking agencies.

This accusation climaxed a day—kaleidoscopic with fast-moving developments—which was begun with the opening of the SEC hearing on the stock delisting action against Transamerica, holding company for the vast Giannini banking empire.

SEC Is Attacked

Simultaneously with the opening of the hearing, Richberg and other Giannini attorneys filed with the District Supreme Court an injunction suit against commission attorneys and officials, charging them with violating Federal banking law in delving into the affairs of the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association, San Francisco, big parent bank in the Giannini group.

They contended that records of national banks are available only to Federal banking agencies, and by permission of the Office of Comptroller of the Currency, only to the following additional agencies for confidential use: Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Federal Home Loan Banks.

Defended by Morgenthau

Douglas' letter was made public after Richberg had vigorously attacked the SEC procedure at the opening session of the Transamerica hearing, which, in effect, was merely a succession of sharp verbal exchanges between opposing counsel, since no witnesses were called.

He characterized as "misleading" a statement by Richberg that no

Mystery Blasts Rock Britain; Irish Plotters Suspected

By the United Press.

London, Tuesday, Jan. 17.—Special guards were thrown around electric and other key utility plants in cities of England and Scotland early today after eight mysterious bombings and explosions which Scotland Yard suspected might be linked to a new Ulster independence campaign by the outlawed Irish republican army.

Detectives searched for sympathizers of the Republican army in England because the blasts—in London, Manchester, Birmingham and Crosby—coincided with the appearance of proclamations in northern Ireland announcing a "supreme effort" to drive out British troops.

Two resounding blasts rocked northern Belfast, in quick succession Monday afternoon.

Shortly before last midnight a bomb exploded at the base of a large watertower in Birmingham with considerable damage, rousing residents from their beds in alarm.

U. S. Clerks Included

By Robert C. Albright.

Approving recommendations of the Social Security Board, President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to extend Federal old age and unemployment compensation benefits "to all of our people as rapidly as administrative experience and public understanding permit."

He called for extension of Social Security act "protection" to workers now exempt, in submitting a report by the Social Security Board on proposed changes in the law.

Old-age insurance coverage for the Government's army of Federal workers was asked in the report.

The board said it anticipates no administrative difficulties in including "service performed in the employ of the United States or its instrumentalities."

National Banks Included

But in extending old-age insurance to all Federal Government employes, it said the effect on existing retirement systems must be considered. It suggested that Federal workers covered by retirement systems either be excluded or the systems themselves be adapted "so they would take account of the basic protection afforded by the old-age insurance system."

In any event, the board said, National banks and other so-called instrumentalities of the Federal Government should be included. It said it has been unable after study to overcome Constitutional barriers to pension coverage for State and municipal employes.

Along with inclusion of Federal employes, the report recommended Federal old-age pensions be extended ultimately to farm workers and domestic help and be extended immediately to American seamen and employes of non-profit bodies.

Holds Politics 'Harmful'

The President in his message named no specific group, but said equity and sound social policy require "extending this protection to as large a proportion as possible of our employed population."

He advised Congress to build on tried social security act principles.

At the same time he indorsed, though not by name, several specific proposals by the Senate's Unemployment and Relief Committee, including that group's recommendation

Subway Employes Stole $1,250,000, All in Nickels

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 16.—District Attorney Dewey announced today two employes of the city-owned independent subway had been arrested by his detectives and 28 of its station agents and maintenance men were being sought for questioning on charges of stealing more than $1,250,000 in nickels from the system's turnstiles in three years.

The peculations constitute the largest wholesale thieving ever uncovered on the subways of New York City. They are the first serious thefts discovered in the independent subway since it began operation on September 10, 1932. One subway employe, it was learned, has already admitted cashing $100,000 worth of the fares in a safe deposit box.

Wire Firms Denied Right to Cut Pay

Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, yesterday denied the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies permission to employ messenger boys at less than the 25-cent-an-hour minimum specified by the fair labor standards act.

The companies had asserted that 5,000 boys would have to be dismissed if the exemption were denied.

Farley Secretly Polls Leaders on New Deal Setback

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee, was disclosed last night to have launched a secret poll among key Congressional Democrats to ascertain reasons for the New Deal set-back in November and "clarify" the picture for "the future."

His letter said, "I wonder if you will take a little time • • • to make a complete survey without indicating in any way that you are seeking the information for me."

Some representatives were perplexed. Others were frankly skittish, fearing that "Big Jim" is maneuvering for the Presidency and intends to chart a course based on the groundswell against the New Deal.

Slayer Gives Up After 'Quiet' Day

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Police said Joseph Borys, 62, walked into the Racine Avenue Police Station today and said:

"I killed a woman."

Borys was arrested and squads dispatched to the Borys home. There they found the body of Mrs. Frances Piotrowski, 49, a roomer, lying beside her bed.

Policemen said Mrs. Borys admitted she heard screams yesterday morning, discovered the body and urged her husband to call the police but that he said, "No, I won't go today; I want a quiet Sunday."

New D. C. Plan Levies $13,200,000 on Sales, Incomes, Investments

Roosevelt Creates Board to Study U. S. Payments To District

A new study of the Federal payment to the District was launched yesterday with the creation of a Federal Real Estate Board by executive order of President Roosevelt.

Addressing a special message to Congress, the President stated that the board's duties will include recommendations for disposition of surplus real estate owned by the Government and regarding "the situation in different communities adversely affected by the loss of tax revenue on land purchased or acquired by the Federal Government."

The President said the executive order carried out a recommendation of a special committee named by him in 1935 to study Federal ownership of real estate and its bearing on local taxation.

Deprived of Taxes

The report shows that the District is deprived of an aggregate of $10,569,981 in taxes by reason of the exemption of Federal owned property.

Total Federal acreage is placed at 10,386 or 23.43 per cent of the whole land area within the District. Assessments on the basis of the District's $1.75 tax rate would be $336,193,128 on the land and $337,433,200 on improvements or a total of $703,626,328.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, who has been making a study preparatory to recommending a new Federal fiscal policy toward the District, immediately hailed the President's message as a step in the right direction.

Sick at home, he did not see the report and said he had not anticipated it.

Cite Loss of Revenue

"It sounds great," he commented by telephone, however. "And I hope one of the first places they start making an adjustment is in Washington, as the injustice is greatest here."

District officials, who have pointed to the loss of revenue for years, declined to comment until they could examine the text of the committee report.

The board will consist of one representative from each of the following executive departments: Procurement Division of Treasury, Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Interior, Justice, Navy and War, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the Bureau of the Budget.

Appointments will be made by heads of the departments. The board also may designate additional members from other departments if it desires.

Owns 20 Per Cent of Land

The report showed that the Federal Government owns about 20 per cent of all the land in the United States.

Holdings of the Federal Government throughout the United States were tabulated in 1937 at 394,657,721 acres of land, valued, with improvements, at $4,696,062,000.

It was estimated that should the Government pay taxes on its holdings the bill would run to $91,051,374 on the basis of 1937 valuations. At the same time, however, the committee pointed out that the States receive much larger sums annually from the Federal Government in various forms of relief, highway aid, and other grants.

A legal opinion accompanying the report stated that the Federal Government probably could waive its right to exemption from property taxes on Federal land if it desired. It noted that Congress already has permitted local governmental agencies to tax the property of various

Salient Points Of D. C. Tax Plan

District tax proposals submitted to Congress yesterday would:

Enact an income tax on salaries above $14,000 and investments in excess of $500 coupled with a 2 per cent retail sales tax.

Tax corporations and public utilities 5 per cent of their net income.

Impose uniform 4 per cent franchise tax on all utilities except Capital Transit Co., which would pay 3 per cent.

Levy 2 per cent gross receipts tax on parking lots.

Give District Commissioners authority to fix tax rate yearly between $1.50 and $1.75.

A. M. A. Backs Roosevelt Health Plan

For 10-Year Program Except Compulsory Insurance Feature

Heads of the American Medical Association yesterday informed President Roosevelt of their decision to go along with his plan to put adequate medical care within the reach of persons unable to pay for it.

A delegation, headed by Dr. Irvin Abell, Louisville, president of the A. M. A., informed the President of association approval of the main parts of his national health program, estimated to cost $850,000,000 in 10 years.

President Avoids Dispute

Dr. Abell explained, however, that the A. M. A. was strongly opposed to a suggestion for compulsory sickness insurance. Experience has shown, he insisted, that compulsory insurance "lowers the quality of medical care."

The President was represented as holding aloof from the controversy over health insurance between the A. M. A. and the interdepartmental health committee. Conferences on details of the health program have been held by the committee and the medical group.

The committee, of which Miss Josephine Roche is head, has made compulsory insurance a part of its program. Dr. Abell said the President spoke favorably merely of the basic principles of the plan.

Plan to Go to Congress

The program provides for additional hospitals in rural sections, improved means for protecting maternal and child health, special diagnostic and treatment clinics and medical care for persons too poor to afford medical attention.

Miss Roche, who accompanied the group to the White House, explained that the committee was anxious that "standards of medical care should be maintained and approved." The President intends to transmit the health plan, when

Program as Sent To Congress Repeals Tax on Intangibles, Business Privilege

By James D. Secrest.

A District tax program estimated to yield a maximum of $13,200,000 revenue to come chiefly from a combined income-sales tax, a corporation levy, and a flexible realty tax, was submitted to Congress late yesterday by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

The committee, however specified that the 150-page report "does not represent the views or recommendations" of the committee but is transmitted in accordance with the law authorizing the survey. The report will be referred to the House District Commttee which will hold hearings and draft legislation.

Two surprises were contained in the report and a last-minute change was made in the income tax provision.

A 2 per cent tax on the gross receipts of parking lots, expected to raise $25,000, and a change in the law imposing a personal property tax on automobiles to put it on a pro rata basis were the additions. The latter change would give the District an additional $40,000.

The base of the earned income tax was lowered from $15,000 to $14,000, presumably to insure a court test by reaching the salaries of a handful of Federal officials.

Business Levy Dropped

The major recommendations in the report, prepared by Dr. Chester B. Pond, Albany fiscal expert, and Colin F. Stam, counsel of the joint committee, are:

The intangible personal property tax, which produces $3,600,000, be repealed and the business privilege levy, which yields $2,200,000, be allowed to expire with the present fiscal year.

A combined personal-income and a 2 per cent retail-sales tax be enacted to raise $6,775,000.

A corporation tax of 5 per cent on net income be imposed. The expected return is $2,700,000.

The diversified public utility franchise taxes be dropped in favor of a single 4 per cent tax on gross receipts of all utilities except the Capital Transit Co., whose tax would be 3 per cent because of its financial condition. The net gain is $360,000.

The real estate rate be made flexible between $1.50 and $1.75, with the Commissioners authorized to fix it each year so as to avoid accumulation of a surplus.

Would Balance Budget

A minor recommendation was that the law relating to the board of tax appeals be changed so its jurisdiction is extended to motor vehicle fuel taxes and that taxpayers be required to exhaust their remedy before the board of equalization and review before appealing to the appellate board.

It was apparent that the tax program, if enacted, would produce much more money than necessary to balance the 1940 District budget.

Thus a reduction in the real estate levy well below $1.75 may be expected should other taxes be adopted by Congress.

A letter accompanying the report stated that 7 of 10 members of the Citizens Advisory Committee concurred in the recommendations of the report.

Tax System Now Obsolete

Two members, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, disagreed with the findings, it was said, while Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, refrained from voting on the pub-

Blaze Kills D. C. Nurse, Man Hurt Trying to Save Her

A District nurse succumbed to burns in Alexandria Hospital last night after kerosene flames enveloped her clothes and transformed her into a human torch. A Washington real estate man was badly scorched in his attempt to extinguish the flames.

The woman was Miss Laura Sowers, 33, of 1701 Sixteenth street northwest, secretary to Dr. William M. Sprigg. The second victim, Terry B. Simms, 50, of 1212 Floral street northwest, also was being treated at Alexandria Hospital for burns.

The accident occurred yesterday morning in a cottage owned by Simms on the Franconia-Burke road about seven miles west of Alexandria.

According to Policeman James Mahoney, of Fairfax County, Simms told him he was taking Miss Sowers to her home in Berryville, Va., near Winchester. They stopped at Falls Church and bought groceries, then went on to Simms' cottage and prepared to cook the food. Simms went into the living room, and Miss Sowers into the kitchen.

Suddenly the woman began screaming. Simms told Mahoney, and as he rushed into the kitchen he bumped into Miss Sowers, her clothes aflame.

A neighbor, Mrs. A. S. Covell told police she had heard the screams and hurried over to investigate. On seeing the flames, she put in a call for Franconia firemen.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

My favorite speech of the 1939 crop on the Hill is the one by Congressman Ludlow of Indiana which began bluntly:

Deirdre . . . poetic names

"Mr. Speaker, America is the hope of the world."

He once wrote a book called "Senator Spiffledink," a satire on political bunkum.

* * * *

Probably the most poetic trio of names in Washington are those of the three daughters of Mr. Brennan, the Irish Minister: Emer (pronounced Aver); Deirdre (Dardra), and Maeve (or Meadhbh, pronounced Me-iv). Be sure and get that straight.

* * * *

Some of those who observed Harry Hopkins closely during his ordeal by questions before the Senate Committee think that right now he hasn't the physical strength to be a Presidential candidate in 1940. I thought he looked weary of it all. Some of his sentences ended in a sort of a sigh. He was quick on the comeback to most of Senator Vandenberg's and Senator Bailey's savagely polite questions, but he was not the same aggressive Hopkins who testified on the relief bill before his operation last year.

"—frolic at the White House"

A few fortunate bigshots and medium shots feel they have what amounts to a standing invitation to drop in at the White House anytime and use the swimming pool. They bring friends.

Usually, though, they do it while the Roosevelts are away. Quite a frolic, to hear tell.

* * * *

When I listen to Mrs. Alice Longworth I find I have to concentrate harder than with most Washingtonians. She speaks swiftly and with unique inflection; if you relax one minute you're apt to miss the point—often a sharp one. Her house near Dupont Circle is probably the Capital's most eminent rendezvous for notables.

* * * *

If constituents keep on trouping into the Senators' private dining-room at the Capitol in such numbers to lunch with their Senators, it will have to be enlarged . . . At 1:30 the other day there were only 8 Senators in the room and they seemed to be buying lunches for 31 guests.

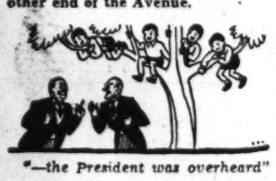
Sometimes the President devotes almost half of his press conference time to puncturing legends he says have become current about his thoughts and intentions . . . No, he didn't read that message aloud to four advisers; he hasn't even begun to write it . . . No, he didn't block that California judgeship . . . No, he hasn't thought of any new appointments . . . No, that's just another story . . . No, that sounds like the other end of the Avenue.



"—the President was overheard"

As I cut across from the White House front porch to the side entrance, and look across the south grounds, I often think of the era which seems so peaceful now, when Roosevelt the First was President and his youngest son, Quentin, and his gang of 10-year-olds terrorized the neighborhood with their pranks.

* * * *

One day Teddy was standing under a tree in animated argument with the French Ambassador . . . Suddenly Jusserand heard a noise and looked up; there were Quentin Roosevelt and four other small boys high in the branches, listening.

Teddy made 'em pledge on their honor they wouldn't repeat a word of it.

* * * *

Ten years later Ambassador Jusserand had the tragic duty of conveying to the Theodore Roosevelts the official communique that Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt had been shot down with his plane in action in France. Many a veteran of the AEF who decided to name his first son Quentin wasn't thinking of Walter Scott's hero.

40 Southerners Map Economic Program

Atlantic Parley Forms Council for Regional Development

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 16.—Accepting a recent report of the National Emergency Council to President Roosevelt as "an essentially true diagnosis of economic conditions" in the South, a group of Southern leaders set out today to do something about it.

Representing all walks of Southern life, the group, 40 or more, organized a "council of Southern regional development," intended to become "an active, well-staffed, well-financed agency co-ordinating the work that is being done by a number of agencies already in existence" and to "devote itself to long-range planning for the South."

Federal Aid Sought

Federal aid for agriculture, health, education and labor was advocated, along with a suggestion that freight rates be equalized, and measures affecting owner-tenant relationships be renovated.

Other recommendations included extension by States to their citizens of benefits already created and available under the national social security acts, and abolition of the poll tax as the prerequisite to voting.

Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal and Times was named chairman of the newly formed council. Ethridge, Barry Bingham, president of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and State Representative Francis P. Miller of Fairfax, Va., called the group together.

Favor Housing Program

For agriculture they urged "continued expansion of the rehabilitation work of the Farm Security Administration . . . and to provide the authorized appropriations for the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act . . .

Continuation of the Federal housing program, with equivalent appropriations for rural and urban rehousing, also was proposed.

The council termed public health "acute" in the South and indorsed the program of the National Health Conference for Federal co-operation with States and counties in extending medical aid.

Appropriation of Federal funds for equalization of educational opportunities in all States, the funds to be an "equitable distribution between the races and democratic distribution among the States," was recommended.

The group indorsed the Federal legislative and Administration program for guaranteeing rights of labor and asked "continued application of the fundamental principles on which the program is based," including wage standards and collective bargaining."

Banks Are Upheld In Right to Handle Taxes and Estates

Banks and trust companies are within their rights in drawing contracts, handling tax matters and administering estates for their customers, the District Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in an opinion by Justice Edgerton, concurred in by Justice Vinson.

The court rejected the appeal of Richard L. Merrick, chairman of the District Bar Association's committee on unauthorized practice of the law, who claimed such services given by the banks were an unlawful invasion of the legal profession.

"Business necessity," said Justice Edgerton, "which probably requires defendant to present checkbooks to the customers of its banking department, requires it to present some legal instruments and some elementary legal information to the customers of its trust department."

Suffrage Group Asks Congress' Aid

The Citizens Conference on District Suffrage yesterday called on Congress to co-operate "in seeking a method by which residents of the District may secure rights similar to those of other loyal American citizens." A letter to members of Congress from Wilbur S. Finch, head of the conference, said:

"Because our National legislature is also our city legislature, we must look to you for assistance . . ."

Vivid Picture of Starving Spain Brought Back by D.C. Resident

Red Cross Official Finds Loyalist Capital Crowded and Hungry

By Edward T. Folliard

ERNEST J. SWIFT.

A first-hand account of life in Barcelona, with its crashing air bombs, its hunger and cold and misery, has been brought back to Washington by Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of the American Red Cross in charge of insular and foreign operations.

In the week he was in Barcelona—November 27 to December 4—he discovered that bombings are a daily and nightly horror; that "the whole of loyalist Spain is suffering from an acute food shortage;" that "fresh vegetables are never seen by the average family;" that the plight of small children is "tragic," there being very little fresh milk for the smallest and none for those between 2 and 4, and that there is no fuel to heat the schools.

Nevertheless, he found the populace enduring it "philosophically."

Studied Flour Distribution

Swift, who served as Red Cross representative with the Second Division in the World War, lives here with his family at 1516 Thirty-third street northwest. He went to loyalist Spain to see something of the distribution by the American Friends Service committee of the flour donated by the American Red Cross.

On his return to Washington, he submitted a confidential report to Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, a report that can now be made public.

Entering Spain through Perpignan, France, he was met by Dr. Junod and Dr. Marti, of the International Red Cross committee in Spain.

Rural Sections Better

"We left Perpignan and crossed the border into Spain before noon," he said in his report. "As we motored through Figueres and Gironda it was hard to realize the country was embroiled in a savage civil war. The countryside was truly beautiful, peaceful, with carefully cultivated farms bordering an excellent highway. . . . There was little evidence of need in the rural sections.

"However, as we neared Barcelona the scene changed. Towns, small and large, bore evidences of war in bomb-wrecked houses. The people, too, seemed to show more the effect of continuous warfare. . . .

"It is estimated that there are now about 24,000,000 people in Spain. Of these . . . 10,000,000 are in loyalist Spain. The number of refugees in loyalist Spain coming from non-loyalist territory is said to have increased the population by 20 to 25 per cent. The government has actually registered over 2,000,000 refugees and estimates that the winter load will be as high as 3,000,000. . . .

Basic Foods Meager

"The problem is not solely the care of these people. The whole of Loyalist Spain is suffering from an acute food shortage. Not only has the country been severed by the Nationalist army from its food producing centers, but its ports of Valencia and Barcelona have been blockaded from the air . . .

"The whole population has been placed on minimum rations obtained through registration and food cards. Prices are fixed, but supplies of even the most basic foods are meager. Milk, fats, oils are unobtainable for adults. Fresh meats are seldom issued, fish only occasionally. Canned meats are used in civilian hospitals, but only sparingly . . . Many people . . . were living on a ration of bread, lentils, beans, some rice and fish once in two weeks. Bread is very scarce, the average ration per person being about 100 grams a day, as contrasted with 500 grams in normal times . . ."

Douglas Charges Richberg With Being Trouble-Maker

Gianini

The statement, he added, "is entirely beside the issue between the commission and Transamerica, and is so obviously intended to provoke dissension between this commission and the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve Board that it needs no further comment."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau declared he regarded as "perfectly legal" the Treasury's action in turning over to the SEC data relating to the Bank of America. The information was made available, it is understood, on advice of Herman Oliphant, whose death last week left a vacancy in the Treasury general counsel's office.

Meanwhile, efforts of the commission to gain access to the bank's books were headed for a showdown in the Federal courts, with John C. Rogge, chief of SEC counsel, announcing the commission's intention to fight to a finish the move to withhold the records.

Hearing This Morning

The first step in the legal battle will be a hearing this morning in the District Supreme Court, presumably before Justice Jennings Bailey, on a motion by Richberg for a temporary order denying access to the books until the question whether the commission shall be permanently enjoined from obtaining the records is decided.

Records of Bank of America are regarded by the commission as essential in its stock delisting action against Transamerica, which is based on the charge that financial records filed by the holding company contain "false and misleading statements." The accusation is based in large part on transactions involving Bank of America.

In the event a temporary restraining order withholding bank records is granted, the commission intends to proceed with that part of the hearing relating specifically to Transamerica. W. L. Andrews, treasurer and chief accounting officer of the holding company, will be called to "give a picture" of the Transamerica setup.

Verbal Battle Warm

The verbal battle between Richberg and Rogge at the opening hearing became so warm that Henry Fitts, of Chicago, SEC trial examiner conducting the proceeding, several times intervened. Once he warned against "remarks across the table" between counsel.

Rogge declared that the injunction suit "comes with very bad grace" in view of the fact that commission attorneys were not notified of it until after the hearing had started. He remarked that counsel for Transamerica had had 57 days in which to take the case into court.

Richberg was vitriolic in branding as a violation of the law the commission's action in including Bank of America transactions in a public hearing. He criticized as "scandalous and slanderous" parts of Rogge's opening statement to the commission.

Fitts, himself one of the defendants in the injunction suit, admitted Rogge "may be a little argumentative," but he reminded Richberg that "you are holding up your side pretty well."

Centers Around Records

The whole controversy centers around use of the bank's records. Rogge contended that a bank which, until 1937, was wholly owned by a holding company (in this case, Transamerica) was different from a bank whose stock was owned by the public. Stock of Transamerica, he pointed out, is sold on exchanges. This brings Bank of America, he contended, within the realm of commission scrutiny.

The proceeding against Transamerica is to determine whether, because of the charges made regarding holding company records filed with the commission, stock exchanges should be forbidden to handle its stock.

Rogge, in his opening statement, outlined what the commission expected to show. He declared that Transamerica "wrote up securities and reflected unrealized appreciation as income; employed devices to avoid the necessity of writing off as losses $35,214,000 of assets found by national bank examiners to be worthless; failed to take sufficient depreciation and refused to recognize realized losses; created fictitious profits through intercompany transactions, and failed to provide adequate reserves."

Richberg moved to strike from the commission order everything relating to Bank of America. This motion will have to come before the full commission for decision.

$14 Basic Wage Is Set for Minors By District Board

The District Minimum Wage Board yesterday established $14 as the basic weekly pay for "several thousand" persons under 18 engaged in occupations previously unclassified.

The $14 wage can be paid only in the first year of employment, after which the regular rate—$17, in the case of office workers—takes effect.

Sub-Committee Senators Lean To Relief Cut

House Figure Likely To Be Sustained; WPA Chief Makes Appeal

Sufficient Senate sub-committee votes at least to sustain the House slash of $150,000,000 in Administration deficiency relief estimates last night were reliably reported.

An informal canvass of sub-committee sentiment indicated efforts to raise the appropriation substantially above the $725,000,000 House figure would be overridden when the vote is taken in the group later this week.

The sub-committee yesterday heard Works Progress Administrator F. C. Harrington appeal for the full $875,000,000 urged by the President to employ an average of 2,870,000 WPA workers for the next five months. Nearly 500,000 fewer jobs would be provided under the House figure.

Glass Would Cut Deeper

Although Senator Glass, of Virginia, appropriations committee chairman, is prepared to ask a cut to $600,000,000 or less, Senator Adams, of Colorado, sub-committee chairman, expressed doubt that his group will slash deeper than the House, but he pointed out that hearings are still in progress and there has been no discussion of totals.

The sub-committee this morning will complete examination of Col. Harrington and this afternoon will hear Mayor LaGuardia of New York advocate of a $915,000,000 appropriation, and other witnesses. Tomorrow or Thursday it will meet to agree on the bill.

Politics Curbs Ready

Three strong amendments aimed at elimination of politics in relief meanwhile were prepared for the sub-committee by Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Chairman Byrnes, of the Senate's Special Unemployment Committee.

The amendments, expected to be approved in substance by the sub-committee, would:

Impose a $1,000 fine or one year in prison on anyone found guilty of soliciting any funds for political purposes from persons receiving Federal relief compensation.

Immediately remove from office any Federal relief official or supervisor who uses "his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting the results thereof."

Punish by a $1,000 fine or one year in jail any promise of a Federal relief job in return for political support, or any threat to fire a relief worker for failure to give such support.

Three Bans Submitted

Two of the three bans on political activity were recommended in the Unemployment Committee's report last week, and were submitted to the Senate yesterday in combination with a third by Senator Hatch.

"Gestures" Made

Two amendments aimed at "politics-in-relief" were included in the bill which passed the House Friday. One would cut off the pay of any relief worker or relief official active politically among his fellows, and the other, in conflict, would apply the ban only to relief officials. Both the House provisions and the Senate proposal were regarded largely as gestures, as no general elections will occur during the life of the fund.

Chairman Byrnes of the Senate Unemployment Committee, who is also a member of the Appropriations sub-committee, said the politics ban, alone among his committee's sweeping recommendations for revamping of Federal relief and public works setups, will be offered as an amendment to the deficiency bill. He said his broader recommendations will be considered later in connection with regular 1940 appropriations.

Reduction Forces Fade

Prospect of any sharp cut in the $725,000,000 House figure diminished as only Glass and one other Democrat on the sub-committee appeared aligned with three Republicans for further reduction. The other six members, all Democrats, predominantly favored the House amount, with some sentiment for an increase. One member of the group said he is confident a majority will stand by the $150,000,000 slash.

A sharp sectional fight is simmering on a House provision restricting WPA wage differentials for the same class of work to 25 per cent. Southerners in a bloc support the restriction, while Senators from the North, where WPA pay levels are higher, just as vigorously oppose it. In the end the amendment is expected to be rewritten to compromise differences.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, was granted membership on the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday.

REP. DARDEN

Darden announced he would introduce a bill tomorrow authorizing the Navy to acquire 600 acres of land adjoining the so-called "East Camp" property, authorized for purchase in 1934, to add to the Hampton Roads base.

Acquisition of the East Camp area for use in a major expansion of the fleet air facilities at Hampton Roads was recommended by the Hepburn National Defense Board in its report to Congress two weeks ago.

The Senate confirmed three diplomatic appointments yesterday—Spruille Braden, of New York to be Ambassador to Colombia; Frank P. Corrigan, of Illinois, to be Ambassador to Venezuela, and John C. Wiley, of Indiana, to be Minister to Latvia and Estonia.

It also confirmed appointment of Francis Wilton Reichelderfer, of Indiana, to be chief of the Weather Bureau, and Ambrose O'Connell, of New York, to be Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Bills introduced yesterday included these by Representatives:

Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts—To give postal employes a bonus of $100 a year for each ten years of service, and an additional $100 for each additional five years up to 30 years.

Fish (Republican), New York—To provide for payment of financial penalties to families of lynch victims by the communities in which lynchings occur.

Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland—To increase by $140,000 the appropriation for the Denton, Md., Federal Building to furnish Federal court accommodations.

Eliot Demands Defense Bases In Atlantic

Program Necessary To Meet Italian, Nazi Air Threats, He Says

American defensive plans under the Monroe Doctrine should be extended to include islands lying off the Atlantic Coast of the Western Hemisphere, Maj. George Fielding Eliot, eminent author and commentator on national defense, declared last night in the first of the 1939 series of the Bronson Cutting memorial lectures.

"The United States should make clear its intention to prevent any nation, with which we might ever be at war, from obtaining bases which could be used to attack any part of the American continents," he told 2,500 in Constitution Hall.

Two Routes Offer Danger

Explaining that there are two routes for crossing the Atlantic, Maj. Eliot declared that on the northern course the Danish possessions of Iceland and Greenland would be dangerous "stepping stones" if they fell into German control.

The southern route would become a menace, he said, if the Azores and Cape Verde Islands were taken over by Germany or Italy or were used by either of them, with the consent of Spain and Portugal, for the establishment of air and naval bases.

In an interview earlier in the afternoon he declared:

"It doesn't make any difference today whether a peacefully minded nation wins the war or not, because a lot of its noncombatants are going to get killed, regardless.

Warns Against Air "Blackmail"

"Air power has become a means of international blackmail," he continued, "and to avoid its use against us we must prevent aggressive nations from providing bases from which to attack."

Maj. Eliot urged that a joint committee of the House and Senate be named to study the whole field of American military and naval policy in relation to our foreign policy.

Pointing to the United States lack of outlying bases on the Atlantic seaboard, he declared "we should institute negotiations at once to get British consent for the construction of naval bases in Nova Scotia, Bermuda and Trinidad."

Such stations, he stated, would give the Navy greater mobility and prevent any aggressive foreign power from gaining a position from which to attack either in the air or on the water.

Sees No Immediate Peril

"We are in no danger from air attack today because planes still are unable to fly across the Atlantic," he said.

Maj. Eliot remarked that the construction of a base at Guam, an island in the Pacific, depended upon the policy to be pursued in relation to the Philippines. He explained that Guam would be a needed naval base if the United States is to continue as the protector of the islands.

Needed changes in the national defense setup advocated by Maj. Eliot during his interview called for a revision of the pay scales of Army enlisted personnel to bring them into line with those received by Navy men.

Urges Larger Army Pay

"At the present time," he stated, "Army enlisted men get about half the sum paid Navy men of equal rank. The Army is rapidly becoming as highly technical a service as the Navy and its pay scale should be raised accordingly. So long as life and pay in the military service remain unattractive the Army is going to stay behind the eight ball."

Maj. Eliot also urged that the production of military planes be increased to use idle manufacturing capacity and that buying of military and naval equipment be coordinated. He frowned, however, upon the idea that increased efficiency might be obtained by setting up a single department of national defense, "because there would be constant bickering and quarreling without getting anywhere, or one of the two services would dominate the other."

Among those attending the lecture were Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations; Senator Norris, of Nebraska; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, and others prominent in the official life of the National Capital. Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman presided.

Mexico Expels N.Y. Times Writer

Mexico City, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Frank L. Kluckhohn, correspondent of the New York Times, tonight was detained by agents of the department of interior and "invited to leave Mexico within 24 hours."

A request was made through diplomatic channels last night that the Mexican government allow Frank Kluckhorn sufficient time to attend to personal affairs before leaving the country.

'Keep Embargo' Wires Hit 100,000

By the Associated Press.

More than 100,000 messages urging Congress to retain the Spanish embargo against arms shipments had been delivered up to last night, telegraph companies reported.

The messages began to flood in on the Capital soon after several members of the Catholic clergy made appeals Sunday for retention of the embargo.

One telegraph company said the volume was increasing rapidly last night.

Canada Held Loser In U.S. Trade Pact

Ottawa, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Canada is making many concessions to the United States and other countries for which nothing will be received in return, R. J. Manion, conservative leader, said today in the House of Commons in criticism of the Canada-United States trade agreement.

"Every time this government deals with the United States it gets the worst of it. It gives two for one," Manion declared.

Plan to Fortify Wake and Guam Islands Stirs Nippon drove against the government's Gaya line.

(The correspondent of the London Daily Herald said the loyalist high command had appealed for volunteers for "suicide squads" to delay the insurgent advance until reinforcements could be massed to check Franco's pounding advance all along the Catalonian front. Catalonian anarchists were the first to respond to the "suicide" call and 20 of them were said to be still holding the towers of the Cathedral at Valls, 10 miles north of Tarragona, although insurgents are in full control of the city.)

Planes Bomb Barcelona

Insurgent planes bombed Barcelona and port zone while relays of what the loyalists described as "Italian planes" bombed and machine gunned thousands of refugees fleeing up the coast road into the capital from Tarragona.

The bodies of men, women and children were said to have been piled along the clogged highway after the raids of low-sweeping planes.

The planes roared up and down the road, bombing Villa Nueva Geltru, Gava, Castel de Fels, Vall Carca and other towns only a few miles from the capital.

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The official Spanish Insurgent representative in Great Britain hinted today the Spanish monarchy might be restored if and when insurgents win the civil war.

Franco already has restored former King Alfonso's civil rights and and there have been rumors of a reconciliation between Alfonso and former Queen Victoria Eugenia, preparatory to placing their third son, Prince Juan, on the Spanish throne. They have been separated since soon after he lost his throne in 1931.

U. S.-Brazil Axis Visioned in Aranha Visit to America

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Jan. 16 (AP).—The newspaper O Globo today predicted a "Rio-Washington axis" would be established as the result of the visit of Brazil's foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, to Washington in February.

"The axis should reunite the countries of the continent, thus forming an American bloc capable of acting in an extraordinary way," the paper said.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday he would explore the possibility of loans to Latin-American countries when Brazilian Foreign Minister Aranha comes here next month.

Celler Asks Listing Of Nazi Property Here

Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, proposed yesterday that all German corporations whose securities are in default be required to register assets in this country.

Celler said Americans had invested more than a billion dollars in German bonds and he predicted $150,000,000 in defaulted payments could be collected by attachment proceedings if his bill were passed.

The report showed Freddie's salary was boosted last October from $1,980 to $2,970 a week.

Tokyo Reactionaries Rebuke Roosevelt in Open Letter

Accuse Him of 'Deliberate Interference' In Japan's Affairs; Army Organ Talks of 'Smashing' U. S. Fleet

Special Cable to The Post.

Tokyo, Jan. 17 (Tuesday)—The powerful reactionary group, Shiunso, known as the Purple Clog Society, in an open letter to President Roosevelt today accused him of deliberate interference in Japan's affairs and of irritating and provoking Japan, until the Japanese are beginning to feel the United States is an unfriendly power.

The letter was printed as an advertisement in the newspaper "Nichi Nichi" and said:

"Of late the Japanese have come to entertain a grave doubt as to the American attitude and we deeply regret that the feeling has now spread throughout Japan that the United States is no longer an impartial third power but an unneighborly country which is directly abusing Japan and deliberately trying to interfere in Japan's actions, a nation against which it is well that we should guard ourselves."

The newspaper Kokumin Shimbun, considered the organ of the army and ultra-nationalists, yesterday warned the United States against fortification of Guam and Wake Islands, saying that if such a move was intended as the means toward a political foothold in China, then:

"The Japanese people are determined to smash the American fleet."

Simultaneously Domei, the Japanese official news agency, declared Japan would reject the idea of an international conference to re-examine the Far Eastern problems in the light of the new situation in Asia, as proposed in both the last American and British notes.

However, Domei reported, Japan would be willing to negotiate separately with both those countries if the two will abandon any idea of sanctions against Japan and enable her to obtain access to the raw materials she needs.

Addressing President Roosevelt, the Shiunso declared further, "since the year before last you have taken upon yourself to lead American public opinion in a policy of quarantining aggressor nations, designating particular nations as aggressors and urging the revision of the neutrality act.

"What is more, your so-called economic sanctions against aggressor nations have now become an issue. Now, since your so-called aggressor nations are obviously meant to be Germany, Italy and Japan, we wish to question your views."

The statement then enjoins President Roosevelt to look over the map of the world and to take note of "Britain's vast territory and overflowing resources," typical of "the British type of democracy."

In conclusion, the Shiunso puts forward a three-point program for the United States to follow in Asia, as follows:

The United States should "lead and induce other powers not to indulge in political intrigues in China at the expense of Japan."

The United States should suggest to the principal world powers the redistribution of "British excess territory," so that British resources and markets may be opened to the rest of the world.

The United States should prevail upon the Soviet Union to abandon its program of bolshevizing the world and should join in the anti-comintern pact with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Four Radio Stars Subpenaed by U.S. In Benny Trial

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 16.—Four radio stars—Gracie Allen, George Burns, Jack Pearl and Kenny Baker—were supenaed by Federal authorities today to testify at the trial of Jack Benny, radio and screen comedian, on a smuggling indictment.

Burns already has pleaded not guilty.

The Burns and Benny indictments center around the activities of Albert N. Chaperau, self-styled attache of the Nicaraguan Legation, who today pleaded guilty to three more smuggling indictments, including two which involve Burns.

Benny alone has elected to stand trial, scheduled for January 24. He protested before the Federal grand jury which indicted him last Tuesday that he had met Chaperau over cocktails in Paris and was persuaded that their arrangement was entirely legal. The grand jurors indicted him on three charges of smuggling.

Gregory E. Noonan, acting United States attorney, issued the subpenas today shortly after Chaperau entered his guilty pleas. Two of the pleas were on indictments involving Burns and the third charged Chaperau with distributing $100 worth of smuggled gifts to friends.

23 Die in Argentine Train's Plunge

Santiago del Estero, Argentina, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—At least 23 persons were believed killed today when a locomotive and tender carrying a party of workers plunged into the Albigasta River near Frias, 80 miles southwest of here, where floods had washed away a bridge.

Radio-Controlled Robot Plane to Scout in Wars

Future development of a robot plane, controlled by radio and equipped with automatic cameras for wartime scouting and for aerial photography at high altitudes was described yesterday by Talvert Abrams, plane designer. He spoke before the American Society of Photogammetry, in session at the National Academy of Sciences.

Abrams also told of experiments being conducted in the field of aerial radio television, and of work being perfected on a glass-nosed high-powered pusher plane designed by himself, for possible use as a military pursuit ship with a speed of 350 miles per hour.

Italo-French Pact Barred by Aliens in Spain

Appeasement Awaits End of Aid to Franco, Bonnet Warns Duce

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Jan. 16.—Foreign Minister Bonnet of France, told the League of Nations Council today foreign combatants must be withdrawn from both sides in the Spanish war before there can be any Mediterranean appeasement.

The speech was regarded by many as a challenge to Premier Mussolini of Italy, who has been represented as confident of an Insurgent victory soon and confident that Italy's support of the victory would lend weight to the Fascist agitation for Mediterranean concessions from France.

Bonnet spoke after a League committee reported it was "morally convinced" all foreigners had been withdrawn from the Loyalist front. A few remain in camps behind the lines, the committee said.

The French foreign minister said total evacuation of foreigners from Insurgent areas must follow completion of evacuation of non-Spanish combatants from government Spain.

"Then, and only then," he said, "would it be possible to speak of an appeasement in the western basin of the Mediterranean."

Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, fresh from talks in Rome on Anglo-Italian understanding, did not fully support Bonnet's stand in a following address to the council.

Halifax said his government was "most anxious to co-operate for cessation of intervention on whatever side," but he made no direct reference to foreign fighters.

Loyalists Seek Arms

He said the task should be completed within a month. Spanish sources said this explained a decision of Spanish Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo to withhold comment he had planned for today regarding the "new situation."

Alvarez Del Vayo increased efforts to obtain passage for arms and munitions into Spain.

He declared an insurgent victory would strengthen Mussolini and in effect cost France Tunisia in Mussolini's proposed postcivil-war negotiations.

Daladier Swamped

Paris, Jan. 16 (AP).—Demands for a last desperate effort to save the hard-pressed Spanish government poured in on the French government today.

From anti-Fascists came warnings that a Franco victory would mean a dangerous setback for the democracies. Premier Daladier, whose country has sent at least moral support to the Spanish government, was swamped by demands for some kind of action.

Fascists Warn France

Rome, Jan. 16 (AP).—France was warned today in the Fascist press that any French attempt to save the Barcelona government would dash itself against the Rome-Berlin axis.

Newspapers also called on the Italian people to be ready to avenge French "insults" against their national honor.

It was announced officially that Italian soldiers were among the first Spanish insurgent troops to enter Tarragona, which fell to the insurgents yesterday.

Chinese Repulse Shensi Invasion

Shanghai (Tuesday), Jan. 17 (AP).—Heavy fighting developed along the Yellow River in northeast China today when Japanese infantry, supported by aerial and artillery bombardments attempted an invasion of Shensi Province.

Chinese commanders said they repulsed two Japanese thrusts. Casualties were reported high on both sides.

6 Hurt as Syrians Riot Against France

Damascus, Jan. 16 (AP).—Six persons were injured today in riotous anti-French demonstrations outside the Syrian parliament.

The demonstrators failed, however, to win over the legislators who remained loyal to France, which holds a mandate over the country.

3 Senators Hit U. S. Desire 'to Save World'

British Seek to 'Curry Favor' by Royal Visit, Says Reynolds

By the Associated Press.

The coming visit of the King and Queen of England to the United States was linked in Senate debate yesterday with a criticism of the Administration's foreign policy and its demand for increased national defenses.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, asserted that the royal couple was coming here to "curry favor" and induce the United States to "save" their country. The North Carolinian was joined by Senators Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, and Lundeen (Farm-Labor), of Minnesota, in protesting against the United States "trying to save the world."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt conferred with military, diplomatic and financial advisers and then pledged all participants to secrecy.

Although the conference presumably dealt with the emergency defense program, conferees would not even concede that defense was discussed.

Morgenthau in Parley

The fact that Navy and Treasury supply officers took part prompted speculation that the meeting may have related to procurement of materials for the new aviation and housing phases of the $552,000,000 special defense program.

Among the conferees were Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of War Woodring and Assistant Secretary Johnson, Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison, Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes and Capt. S. W. Kraus, of the Navy.

Reynolds, his voice booming during a two-hour Senate speech, said Great Britain had sent "its handsome, broad-shouldered, fine-voiced" Anthony Eden "to carpet a path that will be traversed by the King and Queen."

Arms Race Blamed on U. S.

Frequently denouncing war, Reynolds said the United States should "not be called upon to shoulder the responsibility of once again saving democracy, the democracy of France and Great Britain."

He said neither nation "will admit we saved their hides, neither will admit they owe us any money, because they have virtually repudiated their debts."

Frazier charged that huge outlays for American armaments were a direct violation of the Kellogg-Briand Treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

"In my opinion," he said, "it has largely been the example set by the United States Government that has caused the wild scramble for increased armaments on the part of all the great nations of the world."

Presidential "Smoke Screen"

Representative Youngdahl (Republican), of Minnesota, said in a radio talk last night that President Roosevelt had "seized upon American patriotism" to create a "smoke screen of war hysteria and armament spending to cover up the failures of the Administration." He asserted the recent appearance of Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt before a Congressional committee was part of this effort.

U. S. Claims Proof Reich's Black Tom Case Was False

By the Associated Press.

American counsel told the German-American Mixed Claims Commission yesterday that there was "added proof since 1936 to break down the German false defense that there was no sabotage during the neutrality" of the United States in 1916 and 1917.

William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General, spoke for American claimants, who seek to recover $50,000,000 from the Reich because of losses in the Black Tom Terminal and Kingsland Arsenal explosions of 1916 and 1917.

Dr. Richard Paulig, German agent, will argue his country's case at conclusion of the American Presentation, which seeks to set aside a 1936 decision for Germany.

At Edinburgh special guards were thrown around the Porto Bello electric power station, the Granton gas works and other electric substations.

After a special conference at Scotland Yard the movements of Irish republican army veterans and sympathizers in England were checked and many of them were questioned.

Nazis Make New Bid for Arabs' Favor

Minister Accredited To Desert Kingdom; Turkish Loan Signed

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 16.—Germany's eastward push gained momentum on three sides today with Hungary, Turkey and Saudi Arabia figuring in the developments.

A 150,000,000-mark ($60,000,000) credit agreement was signed with Turkey for delivery of German manufactured goods to Turkey.

For the first time Germany accredited a minister to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The press said Germany would help develop oil and gold fields there.

Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Count Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, conferred for two hours. The talks were expected to bind Hungary closer to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Later, after Reichsfuehrer Hitler had joined in the Ribbentrop-Csaky conversations, semiofficial quarters said Hungary now was in such close accord with Germany's general aims that secondary problems, such as differences of opinion over Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia), could be solved easily.

The credit agreement with Turkey was negotiated during a visit of the German economics minister, Walther Funk, to Ankara last October.

D.C. Group Sees Baltimore's Special Schools

Mrs. Doyle Leads Tour Of Institutions for Handicapped Children

Looking to the day when Washington will provide schools for all its "special" pupils, members of the District School Board's Advisory Committee on Handicapped Children, yesterday spent the day in Baltimore studying two schools built five years ago to solve that city's similar problem.

The schools, one for colored children and one for white, have attracted national attention and their facilities and the apparent ease of operation yesterday caused Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board of education, to exclaim: "We must get busier than ever."

Low cost of bus transportation, integration of public and private endeavors and the manner in which those of various handicaps—the deaf, partially blind, crippled and cardiac cases—all are taught together impressed committee members.

Charles W. Pimper, president of the Crippled Children's Society and leader in the Washington Kiwanis Club's work for crippled children, was in charge of the visit.

Others who made the trip were Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, member of the Board of Education; Mrs. Elsie Z. Watkins, secretary of the board; Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools; Miss Jessie LaSalle, A. K. Savoy and Dr. H. H. Long, all assistant superintendents; Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chief medical inspector of schools; Dr. A. Barklie, director of the Chest Clinic; Miss Helen Moore, physiotherapist at Langdon School; Dr. William J. Howard, of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, and Mrs. M. Joseph Hanley, chairman of the committee on physically handicapped children for the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Both schools were constructed at a cost of less than $1,500,000, according to Miss Elsie M. Saulsbury, principal of one of them. Classes go from kindergarten through junior high school.

Andrews Fears European Air Raids on U. S.

Super-Bombers Will Return Nonstop, General Tells Convention

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Jan. 16.—American industrial centers and their civilian populations will be targets for enemy bombing planes capable of flying nonstop from Europe and back in any future war unless the United States builds up its defenses, several hundred of the country's leaders in aviation were told tonight.

Addressing the National Aeronautic Association convention, Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, chief of the General Headquarters Air Force, said:

"The so-called superbombers of today are actually nothing but small prototypes of the airplanes of the near future.

"I believe that any of our large airplane companies would be glad to contract to build a bomber capable of a tactical range of 10,000 miles.

"If American airplane manufacturers can build such a bomber, it can be done in other countries.

"Our air forces are inadequate," said Gen. Andrews. Then, referring to the Government's rearmament program, he added, "in building up our national defenses we are saying in unmistakable language, 'hands off the Western Hemisphere—America is for Americans.'"

Gen. Andrews labeled the United States a fifth or sixth rate air power, and said the G. H. Q. had only slightly more than 400 fighting planes at its disposal.

The efforts to combat German and Italian economic and political penetration of South America were described by Oswald Ryan, a member of the newly created civil aeronautics authority.

Y., in honor of his father, the late Cornelius Amory Pugsley, a member of the Westchester County Park Commission. The presentation will be made in the spring at Hamilton Grange, the New York home of Alexander Hamilton

Board to Fix Fidelity's Status

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—A committee of opposing attorneys, 11 auditors and an "impartial arbiter" today was authorized by Judge Baker to determine the exact financial condition of the Fidelity Investment Association and report to the court on January 23.

Judge Baker said the report would form the basis for further action on a petition for receivership for the 28-year-old investment loan organization, which has sold approximately 200,000 investment contracts since 1920. The SEC charged the firm with fraudulent practices.

Baker named Charles P. Mead, Wheeling, as the "special arbiter."

Medics Promise to Appear

Four medical organizations and 21 prominent physicians yesterday promised District Court to appear whenever called to answer the conspiracy charges on which they were indicted after a grand jury investigation of the campaign against Group Health Association, Inc., by "organized medicine."

Appearances were entered by several law firms, under an agreement with the Department of Justice by which the attorneys became responsible for he accused doctors being in court when wanted.

The appearances paved the way for a legal attack on the conspiracy indictment, which is expected to be protracted.

Ellen Maki Receives Post Cup As Ideal Civil Service Employe audit clerk; assistant supervisor, and finally to supervisor of a unit in charge of 20 clerks.

Handles Baby Bonds

Her unit handles baby bonds, and her job requires a knowledge of audit and administrative procedure in addition to the Treasury Department requirements governing savings bonds. They discovered that she attends George Washington University five nights a week; that she is a member of the Delta Zeta Sorority there, and speaks French and the Finnish languages.

The three judges—Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, member of the House Civil Service Committee and unofficial Mayor of Washington; James C. O'Brien, assistant to the chief examiner, Civil Service Commission, and Ira Y. Bain, chief of personnel, Internal Revenue Bureau—drew up a statement which said in part:

". . . The judges found their task an exceedingly difficult one. There were persuasive reasons why all the entrants should be awarded the honor; but in the young lady upon whom the judges finally decided there seemed to be a composite of the qualities for which the judges were searching. Her career in the Federal service does credit to the merit system. . . . In short, the judges feel that they have actually located the ideal feminine civil service employe."

Nation Celebrates Birth

The award was made as Washington and the Nation began a week-long celebration of the fifty-sixth anniversary of the signing of the national civil service act. Here, in the monster mass meeting sponsored by the American Federation of Government Employes, speakers dwelt on the relationship of a strong Federal personnel to the preservation of democracy.

Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell, speaking over the radio, said: "This is a democratic country and our hope is that it shall always remain a democratic country. It is important that the civil service shall be maintained on a strictly competitive and democratic basis, and that no caste shall be permitted to attach to it, no matter how alluring the garb may make it seem.

"Every now and then plans are suggested that depart from the democratic spirit. Proposals have been made that certain young persons who have had greater opportunities than others, and who have shown themselves capable of profiting by these opportunities, shall be recruited into the executive civil service on a limited examination basis, with an implied promise that if they make good they will be the future administrators as heads of the various governmental sections, divisions and bureaus.

"Such a procedure would be violative of both the letter and the spirit of the civil service law, as well as subversive of the whole theory of democracy," the commission president stated.

Walsh Praises Merit

From the auditorium platform, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said he favored civil service over patronage because under the merit plan all races, creeds and conditions have equal employment and promoting opportunity. Democracy cannot exist unless this is so, he stated. He observed that an overwhelming control of Congress by any party tends against the merit system.

Representative Ramspeck, complimented by Walsh and Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway on his work for the merit system and his postmaster bill, said he could use Pennsylvania as a "shining example of the folly of the spoils system." Both parties tried it there "on a great people and failed and it will fail for any party anywhere, anytime," Ramspeck stated.

Defects to Be Remedied

Ordway stated: "We in the United States are not going to fall into one great defect of the British system—the undemocratic establishment of a socially selective classification for appointment and promotion in the service. We shall stick to our principle of keeping open, to all our people, all classes of positions; but at the same time we are also going to remedy our own sorest defect—promotions based wholly on the judgment or whim of an immediate superior."

Far-sighted legislative action is needed to eliminate patronage from American administration," he continued. "Far-sighted appreciation of the economy in adequately financed administration of the civil service itself remains to be translated into legislative appropriation," he stated.

Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin greeted the audience and Representative Randolph promised his "full support" to District of Columbia problems. Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. president, formed the hand-shaking line on the right of Miss Maki, "Miss Civil Service."

Lawyers Guild Denies Keck's Cry Of 'Communists'

A charge by Assistant Chief of Detectives Ira E. Keck that the District Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild is "a bunch of Communists" was labeled "a ready device for ignoring basic complaints" yesterday by Mortimer Riemer, secretary of the guild.

Capt. Keck's statement was in answer to the guild's protest against a police roundup of 100 holdup suspects January 10.

"The unjustifiable and wholesale arrests of innocent citizens cannot be legally justified by attempting to impugn the good faith of the District Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild," Riemer said.

Sheppard's Annual Prohibition Eulogy Rouses Reynolds

Reaction yesterday to the annual plea of Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, for the return of prohibition was similar to previous years. With one startling exception, the drys stayed dry and the wets remained wet.

Sheppard, speaking on the nineteenth anniversary of the ratification of the eighteenth amendment, which was repealed five years ago, was followed on the floor by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who comes up for re-election this year. Reynolds, a stanch advocate of repeal in his last campaign, shouted "Liquor is God's worst enemy. Liquor is the devil's best friend. No one will dare take this floor and deny my statement." No one did and Reynolds changed the subject.

Capone May Testify In Torrio Tax Trial

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Al Capone, who inherited the Chicago rackets of John Torrio 18 years ago, was expected today to be called as a Government witness in Torrio's income tax fraud trial in March.

Torrio was indicted in September, 1937, with three others, and charged with evading taxes and penalties totaling $110,276.80.

Archbishop Curley Banquet Monday

At the Mayflower next Monday night the annual banquet will be held for the Right Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, and the silver jubilee of laymen's retreats will be celebrated.

Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Murphy, Senator William M. Mead, of New York, and Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland are to attend.

The committee in charge includes Dr. M. D'Arcey Magee, Thomas F. Murphy, Earl P. Ready, George E. Case, Rossa F. Downing, John Hadley Doyle, John Gartland, William M. Troy, William Joseph Neale, George H. O'Connor, John J. Keegan, C. Thomas Di Fiel, William F. Ryan, John F. Feeney and Leo A. Codd. James B. Flynn will be toastmaster.

Youth Held to Jury On Narcotics Charge

Arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, Raymond Young, colored, 25, 1333 B street northeast, yesterday was accused of narcotic law violations.

Police said he had 13 capsuls of heroin in his possession. Young pleaded guilty at arraignment and was held to the grand jury under $3,000 bail.

D.C. Aid Faces Cut of 4,700, Mayors Report

The proposed $150,000,000 cut in the requested Works Progress Administration deficiency appropriation will cause 4,700 persons to be dropped from local WPA rolls, according to figures compiled by the United States Conference of Mayors, it was learned yesterday.

Informed of the calculation, Ross Haworth, assistant WPA administrator for the District, declared he thought the figure "a little high" but added:

"If it becomes necessary to drop that many people from the local roll, it will be just too much. It will cause a very serious situation."

Haworth said more than 600 aged persons and women with dependent children dropped from the local WPA rolls January 1 had been dismissed because of a general order which, presumably, was applicable to the entire country.

No Hard and Fast Rule

National WPA officials said there was no hard and fast rule calling for dismissal of such persons. Whenever there is pressure from shortage of funds, however, they declared, persons eligible for aid from other agencies are among the first let go.

The conference of mayors figure on the additional number to be dismissed here if the $150,000,000 cut goes through was believed to be based on the estimated cost of WPA relief of $63 person per month.

"The figure for the District," Haworth declared, "is not that high It is between $55 and $60."

He said the total number to be dismissed because they are eligible for social security old-age benefits or aid to dependent children would be about 650, adding:

"We are still going through the files for persons falling in these categories. There probably will be 25 more to be dropped.

"We have been very reluctant here to let these people go for the simple reason that we realize we are merely shoving them into a kind of 'no man's land.' But it is a matter of necessity.

Fears Breadlines Again

"These poor people are eligible for aid from the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare, but it is well known the division is without sufficient funds to care for them and has not the staff to handle the increased number of cases."

A large number of persons dropped from the rolls as a result of the order gathered at public assistance division headquarters in search of relief.

Hawoth feared that, if the $150,000,000 cut goes through, "we again will have the situation that existed a few years ago when long breadlines were formed here."

C.I.O. Backs Protest

Unanimous support for a mass meeting Thursday to protest cuts in the Federal works program was voted last night by the Washington Industrial Union Council, representing all C. I. O. unions in the District.

The rally, in the auditorium of the old Interior Building at 8 p. m., will hear Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., and Eleanor Nelson, secretary treasurer of the U. F. W. A., protest the House cut in the WPA deficiency appropriation and refusal to grant civil service status to WPA administrative workers.

"More than the WPA is involved in the cut," Sidney Katz, secretary of the Industrial Union Council, said last night. "If the reactionaries are successful it will certainly make them more bold and they will take further such action—maybe against the national labor relations act."

A delegate from the WPA local, U. F. W. A., Bruce Jenkinson, urged extension of civil service to include WPA administrative employes, saying: "The primary reason the reactionaries don't want WPA under civil service is that they don't want to lose the patronage."

3 Navy Men Given Life-Saving Medals

Navy silver life-saving medals were sent yesterday by Secretary Swanson to Floyd LeRue Strelow, aviation chief ordnanceman, at Norfolk, for his attempt to rescue from drowning the mother of Lieut. Comdr. Alexander Martin, of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and to Harold Kenneth Lock, aviation machinist's mate, first class, at Pearl Harbor, for rescuing Lieut. Comdr. Martin's daughter.

The medal was also sent to Donald Wynn Brown, quartermaster, second class, for rescuing a shipmate from drowning.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS
Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste
If you have an excess of acid waste in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of poisonous waste.
When functional kidney disorder permits poisonous matter to remain in the blood, you won't feel well. This may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. If you have trouble with frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning, there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Kidneys may need help the same as bowels. So ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. ADV.

Roosevelt's Security Message

Following is the text of the President's security message to Congress:

To the Congress of the United States:

Four years ago I sent to the newly convened Congress a message transmitting a report of the Committee on Economic Security. In that message I urged that Congress consider the enactment into law of the program of protection for our people outlined in that report. The Congress acted upon that recommendation and today we have the social security act in effect throughout the length and breadth of our country.

This act has amply proved its essential soundness.

More than two and one-half million old people, needy blind persons and dependent children are now receiving sympathetic and humane assistance to the extent of a half billion dollars a year.

Three and a half million unemployed persons have received out of work benefits amounting to $400,000,000 during the last year.

A Federal old-age insurance system, the largest undertaking of its kind ever attempted, has been organized and under it there have been set up individual accounts covering 42,500,000 persons who may be likened to the policyholders of a private insurance company.

In addition there are the splendid accomplishments in the field of public health, vocational rehabilitation, maternal and child welfare and related services, made possible by the social security act.

Proved Progress

We have a right to be proud of the progress we have made in the short time the social security act has been in operation. However, we would be derelict in our responsibility if we did not take adavantage of the experience we have accumulated to strengthen and extend its provisions.

I submit for your consideration a report of the Social Security Board, which, at my direction and in accordance with the Congressional mandate contained in the social security act itself, has been assembling data, and developing ways and means of improving the operation of the social security act.

I particularly call attention to the desirability of affording greater old-age security. The report suggests a two-fold approach which I believe to be sound. One way is to extend our Federal old-age insurance system so as to provide regular monthly benefits not only to the aged but also to the dependent children of workers dying before reaching retirement age. The other way is to liberalize the Federal grants-in-aid to the States to help finance assistance to dependent children.

As regards both the Federal old-age insurance system and the Federal-State unemployment compensation system, equity and sound social policy require that the benefits be extended to all of our people as rapidly as administrative experience and public understanding permit. Such an extension is particularly important in the case of the Federal old-age insurance system. Even without amendment the old-age insurance benefits payable in the early years are very liberal in comparison with the taxes paid. This is necessarily so in order that these benefits may accomplish their purpose of forestalling dependency. But this very fact creates the necessity of extending this protection to as large a proportion as possible of our employed population in order to avoid unfair discrimintion.

Much of the success of the social security act is due to the fact that all of the programs contained in this act (with one necessary exception) are administered by the States themselves, but co-ordinated and partially financed by the Federal Government. This method has given us flexible administration, and has enabled us to put these programs into operation quickly. However, in some States incompetent and politically dominated personnel has been distinctly harmful. Therefore, I recommend that the States be required, as a condition for the receipt of Federal funds, to establish and maintain a merit system for the selection of personnel. Such a requirement would represent a protection to the States and citizens thereof rather than an encroachment by the Federal Government, since it would automatically promote efficiency and eliminate the necessity for minute Federal scrutiny of State operations.

Urges Orderly Progress

I cannot too strongly urge the wisdom of building upon the principles contained in the present social securiy act in affording greater protection to our people, rather than turning to untried and demonstrably unsound panaceas. As I stated in my message four years ago: "It is overwhelmingly important to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts. The place of such a fundamental in our future civilization is too precious to be jeopardized now by extravagant action."

We shall make the most orderly progress if we look upon social security as a development toward a goal rather than a finished product. We shall make the most lasting progress if we recognize that social security can furnish only a base upon which each one of our citizens may build his individual security through his own individual efforts.

48 Guns Seized At Highway Camp

New Madrid, Mo., Jan. 16 (AP).—Sheriff A. F. Stanley said he and his deputies confiscated 48 shotguns, rifles and pistols "as a precaution against violence" at a colored sharecropper camp north of here late today. There were no arrests.

Five hundred disgruntled sharecroppers were transferred to the camp as State police carried out orders to break up their week-long demonstration along main highways. The last highway camp was emptied today.

Declaring that in some States "incompetent and politically dominated personnel has been distinctly harmful," the President recommended that States be required to establish merit systems for selection of personnel, conditional to receiving Federal funds.

Also in line with the Senate Committee findings, he suggested one way of affording greater old-age security would be to make proportionately larger Federal grants in aid to those States with limited fiscal capacities.

The Senate Committee, headed by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, not only urged State application of merit systems in administration of the program, but asked an increase in Federal contributions to States having a less than average per capita income.

Lodge Attacks Proposal

The latter suggestion in both the Byrnes report and the President's message yesterday was under fire from Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, who declared larger contributions to low-income States "sectional and unfair."

The Social Security Board report submitted by the President urged extension of the program ultimately to include farm and domestic labor.

Other specific recommendations of the board:

That monthly old age benefits begin in 1940, instead of 1942.

That monthly benefits in early years be increased, first by supplementary benefits to aged dependent wives of retired workers, and second by calculating benefits on the basis of the "average wage" rather than accumulated total wages.

That provision be made for "survivor's insurance," with benefits to aged widows and to young widows with dependent children.

That benefit credits should be allowed for wages earned after age 65.

That American seamen and persons employed by nonprofit organizations be included under Federal old age insurance.

In an effort to bring more "personal service" employes under the act, the board asked clarification of employer-employe definitions so broader coverage might be offered such occupations as insurance and real estate sales and traveling salesmen.

Like the President and the Byrnes committee, it asked that personnel in State employment compensation agencies be required to be on merit basis.

Vandenberg Opens Fire

Other changes proposed in unemployment compensation features of the act would simplify employer tax-reporting procedure with a view to combined record-keeping for both old-age insurance and unemployment compensation, calculate the pay roll tax on wages paid instead of wages payable and apply the pay roll tax for unemployment compensation only to the first $3,000 of wages paid. Coverage would be extended to employers of one or more employes.

Hearings on the proposed changes will open shortly before the House Ways and Means Committee. A critical fire was immediately opened by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who declared the President "ignores the fundamental necessity of putting the existing system on a sound basis." Vandenberg said he agreed with projected expansion of benefits but urged "mistakes" of the existing law first be corrected.

Roosevelt's Fiscal Message

Following is text of President's fiscal message to Congress:

To the Congress of the United States:

At a meeting of the National Emergency Council held December 17, 1935, I designated the Secretary of the Treasury, the Attorney General, and the acting director of the Bureau of the Budget to serve as a committee to make a study of Federal ownership of real estate and of its bearing on State and local taxation. This study has been completed and I am transmitting herewith for your information, and such further use as you may deem desirable, the report of the committee and the accompanying table and charts.

It will be noted that the report concludes with the following recommendations:

(1) That all branches of the Federal service be directed to declare completely, accurately and promptly their surplus land and improvements in order that a prudent use for such properties may be found or that they may be offered for sale.

(2) That the procurement division of the Treasury Department continue to maintain a current permanent record of all Federal real estate in order that there may be constantly on file available and dependable information with respect thereto.

(3) That there should be constituted a Federal real estate board composed of a representative from each of the Governmental agencies in charge of considerable holdings of Federal income-producing property, a representative from the procurement division, and a representative from the Bureau of the Budget. The duty of this board should be to study and make recommendations regarding the situation existing in individual communities adversely affected by the purchase of substantial amounts of land and their consequent removal from the regular tax rolls of the county or other taxing district; to advise with Federal agencies contemplating the acquisition of additional real estate; and to submit recommendations regarding the disposition of lands that are essentially in the nature of surplus property.

Recommendations Approved

I have approved of the recommendations of the committee and, in order to put them into effect, I have issued an appropriate Executive order establishing the Federal Real Estate Board, and providing for the maintenance by the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, of a current record of all Federal real estate. I am inclosing herewith a copy of this Executive order.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Executive Order, Establishing the Federal Real Estate Board:

By virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, it is ordered as follows:

1. There is hereby established the Federal Real Estate Board, to be composed of representatives designated by the heads of the following named executive departments and agencies, each department and agency to have one representative: Treasury Department (Procurement Division), Department of Agriculture, Department of Commerce, Department of the Interior, Department of Justice, Navy Department, War Department, Tennessee Valley Authority and Bureau of the Budget. The Board may authorize representation thereon of any other executive department or agency, such representatives to be designated as stated above. Pending selection of a permanent chairman by the board the representative of the Treasury Department shall serve as temporary chairman. The members of the board shall be officers or employes of the department or agency which they represent, and shall serve without additional compensation and without entailing additional expense to the Government.

Current Record Asked

2. The Secretary of the Treasury is requested to cause to be maintained by the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department a permanent current record of all Federal real estate, and the several executive departments and agencies are requested to furnish, upon request of the director of the Procurement Division, such information as may be required to maintain such record.

3. The heads of the several executive departments and agencies are requested to supply to the Procurement Division, for use of the Federal Real Estate Board, a current record of all real property under their respective jurisdictions which is not being utilized, in whole or in part, for the purposes of their own department or agency. The board shall consult with, and make recommendations to, the Procurement Division and to the executive departments and agencies concerned, with respect to such disposition of surplus real property as will best serve the interests of the Government.

4. Executive departments and agencies contemplating the acquisition of additional real property are requested, before acquiring such property, to ascertain from the Procurement Division whether there is any real property in Federal ownership that may be made available for the purpose contemplated, and, in all cases in which such action may appear desirable, to consult with the Federal Real Estate Board regarding the acquisition of such Federal property for the use of their own department or agency.

5. The Federal Real Estate Board shall study, and make appropriate recommendations regarding, the situation in different communities adversely affected by the loss of tax revenue on land purchased or acquired by the Federal Government.

Federal corporations, such as the RFC and HOLC.

That the District will not be the only political subdivision fighting for a larger Federal payment in lieu of taxes was disclosed simultaneously with the release of the report.

Members of Congress from several Western States, it was learned, are prepared to make a fight for legislation to compensate their States for tax losses from extensive Indian reservations.

Oklahoma, for instance, has appropriated money to conduct a lobby for this purpose in Washington.

The District is the only jurisdiction, however, which has lost any substantial amount of urban land to the Federal Government.

Roosevelt Submits Disbursements of 64 Agencies to Congress

President Roosevelt reported to Congress yesterday the expenditure of $9,632,271,228 of the $10,349,125,793 emergency funds appropriated for the fiscal years 1935-1939.

He submitted an annual report of the National Emergency Council, showing disbursement by 64 agencies for the following purposes:

Highways, roads, streets, etc., $2,503,719,922; public buildings, $746,146,668; housing, $118,547,962; public recreational facilities, $735,003,177; conservation work, $1,045,653,278; electric, water and sewage utilities, $568,531,654; transportation facilities, $247,503,444; educational, professional and clerical projects, $959,884,013; sewing, canning, and similar projects, $772,396,022; rural resettlement and direct relief, $478,314,606; grants to States for relief, $922,442,607.

Administration of the spending, which primarily was through the WPA, cost $504,927,867.

The report, which showed detailed figures on how and where the money was spent up to December 31, 1938, showed that expenditures included $1,305,802,580 by the WPA; $929,721,347 by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, which preceded WPA, and $541,034,556 by the Civilian Conservation Corps. The remainder was disbursed by numerous regular and new Federal agencies.

Senate Expected To Accept Murphy, Frankfurter Today

By the Associated Press.

Two of President Roosevelt's most important nominations—Felix Frankfurter to the Supreme Court and Frank Murphy to the post of Attorney General—are to go before the Senate today, with approval considered a foregone conclusion.

The Judiciary Committee voted unanimously yesterday to recommend the confirmation of both appointees.

The nomination of Harry L. Hopkins to the post of Secretary of Commerce, meanwhile, awaited action by the Senate Commerce Committee, scheduled for tomorrow. Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, questioned Hopkins closely last week on alleged politics in relief.

Million Acres In Submarginal Land Optioned

More than 1,000,000 acres of submarginal land were held under accepted options as of January 1 by the Soil Conservation Service under Title III of the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act, H. H. Bennett, chief of the service, reported Sunday.

Submarginal land is being acquired under this law as a means of restoring badly depleted submarginal lands to grass and forests, and in order to supplement other Federal, State and local measures to improve land use. These include soil conservation districts, co-operative grazing districts, and rural zoning ordinances.

By the end of next June the service expects to have approximately 2,100,000 acres of submarginal land under option.

Morgenthau Snubs Wallace Processing Tax

Cabinet Colleague Opposes Agriculture Secretary's Proposal

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's advocacy of processing taxes on farm commodities to help finance the agricultural adjustment program received a rebuff yesterday when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said they were "one of the least desirable types of taxes" because they are imposed on consumers.

"The percentage of taxes on consumers is sufficiently high," he added.

Although there was no immediate reaction from Wallace, it was recalled that in his annual report he said the processing tax was "one important thing missing from our present farm program."

"It would help maintain balanced production and surplus control by assuring a continuing source of revenue to finance a portion of the program," the report said.

Wallace also recalled in his report that processing taxes were levied on basic agricultural commodities under the first agricultural adjustment program.

"The program was self-financing and helped to balance the budget," he related.

There also has been some disapproval of processing taxes expressed in Congress.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, which handles tax legislation, said recently he hoped such levies could be avoided.

Leaders Offer 5-Point Program To Help South

Atlanta, Jan. 16 (AP).—Approximately 40 Southern leaders, representing the fields of education, business, journalism, labor and State government, offered a five-point program yesterday for advancement of the South's economic position.

The group was called together by Mark Etheridge and Barry Bingham, general manager and president, respectively, of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times, and State Representative Francis P. Miller, of Fairfax, Va. It elected Etheridge chairman.

The group listed first the problem of agriculture, next public health, and as a third point, recommended appropriation of Federal funds for equalization of educational opportunities. It indorsed the Federal legislative and administration program for guaranteeing the rights of labor.

Monopoly Inquiry Hears Defense of Patent Protection

By the Associated Press.

Conway P. Coe, commissioner of patents, told the temporary National Economic Committee yesterday that "speculative capital must be encouraged to fall in behind a new industrial enterprise," and recommended increased patent protection.

He submitted program for correction of what he said were "abuses or weaknesses" in the patent system. He suggested creation of a single court of patent appeals, a 20-year patent period, and abolition of renewal applications.

lic utility taxes but concurred in the other proposals.

The report emphasizes the obsolete character of the present District tax system and the fact that property taxes, especially on real estate, are far out of proportion to personal taxes.

The conclusions of the investigators, the report stated, were based on a comparison of the tax burden in the District with cities in 12 States.

"The results of the comparison show," the report stated, "that the District of Columbia relies too heavily upon the general property tax and gives almost no consideration to the ability theory of taxation. . . ."

Retailers' License

Insisting throughout the report that the income-sales tax should be considered as a unit, the investigators explain that the 2 per cent retail sales tax allows the following exemptions: (a) food not consumed on the premises, (b) medicines, (c) sales under 25 cents, and (d) articles subject to selective sales taxes, as gasoline and liquor.

Retailers would be required to obtain a license and pay $5 for each place of business.

To prevent avoidance of the tax, a "use" tax of 2 per cent on all tangible personal property in excess of $25 valuation brought into the District by consumers is recommended.

As the sales tax would operate, it was explained, the consumer would pay 1 cent on purchases between 25 and 75 cents and 2 cents on those between 75 cents and $1.

Coupons are suggested as the most practical method of denoting payment of the tax.

Evens Up in Long Run

"Under this scheme every retailer purchases a book of coupons and for each 1 cent of sales tax received mutilates a 1-cent coupon. Thus he is liable to the State for all the money collected.

"By exempting sales under 25 cents, the tax could be paid to the nearest cent. A 25-cent purchase and a 74-cent purchase would each be taxed 1 cent. However, a 75-cent purchase would pay a 2-cent tax.

"By using the coupon system the merchant cannot pocket any tax money he receives in excess of 2 per cent of his total sales. In the long run the number of purchases, ones in which one is relatively overtaxed, will be offset by those in which he is relatively undertaxed. Ohio enforces the coupon provision by a field force which makes a check on retailers."

The income tax itself is divided into two parts, the first applying to all earned incomes in excess of $14,000 and the second to all income above $500 from investments.

Modeled After New York

Two per cent on taxable net income up to $1,000; 3 per cent between $1,000 and $3,000; 4 per cent between $3,000 and $5,000; 5 per cent between $5,000 and $7,000; 6 per cent between $7,000 and $9,000, and 7 per cent on all taxable income in excess of $9,000.

The tax scale is modeled after the New York State income tax act except that the primary exemption is much higher in the proposed District law.

While making no final finding of fact, the report cites court decisions to support the argument that a District income tax applied to Federal salaries would be unconstitutional.

"The proposed plan will permit the question to be settled without incurring such jeopardy, as only Federal employes receiving salaries in excess of $14,000 will be subject to the District income tax," the report stated.

"The combination personal-income retail-sales tax plan," asserts the report, "appears to be the most practical method of meeting the economic, legal and political problems without any attempt to raise the same amount of money by a graduated personal-income tax on all incomes, including Federal salaries, would face."

The proposed corporation income tax of 5 per cent, the investigators said, should allow deductions for tangible personal property taxes paid to the District. A filing fee of $25, to be credited against the tax, should accompany such return and thus insure at least a minimum payment from each corporation.

Utilities Face Double Tax

Taxes on local public utilities will prove more severe than on business corporations if the program is adopted. Besides the 4 per cent levy on gross receipts, the report suggests utilities be required to pay the corporation tax as well.

"Public utilities in the District should pay heavier taxes if they are to bear their fair share of the burden," the report states. "This much can be said without hesitancy.

Doubt Rate Boosts

"When it comes to drawing conclusions for the major utilities separately, there is considerable diffidence. It is clearly demonstrated that the electric utility (Potomac Electric Power Co.) is underburdened, while the transit company (Capital Transit Co.) is overtaxed. The gas company (Washington Gas Light Co.) is also in line for an increase. The figures indicate that the telephone company (Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.) is not out of line."

Regarding the imposition of the corporation tax on the utilities, the investigators observed:

"This will place the burden of added taxation on surplus and should not cause corresponding rate increases to consumers."

The new 4 per cent gross receipts tax on all the utilities save the Capital Transit Co., which would pay 3 per cent, would supplant the present gross earnings tax of 4 per cent on electric and telephone utilities and 5 per cent on the gas company.

The lower rate for the transit company, the report explained, is because "in comparison with the other utilities, this company is in an unfavorable financial and competitive position."

Exemptions for personal property taxes of all public utilities will be continued.

Parking Lot Rules Asked

A 2 per cent gross receipts tax on parking lots is proposed, the investigators explained, "solely for the purpose of reimbursing the District for the loss of real estate taxes resulting from demolition of buildings to make way for parking lots." All operators, moreover, would be required to pay a license fee of $5.

"The matter of parking lots has been the subject of substantial consideration," the report added. "It is believed that the public interest therein is of such importance as to require regulation thereof by the Public Utilities Commission."

Realty Tax Cushion

The flexible real estate rate, the report stated, will give the District Commissioners a cushion of $3,300,000 to raise or lower between $1.50 and $1.75 as budgetary needs require.

"Thus if the revenue yields prove to be in excess of estimates, the District Commissioners will be empowered to lower the tax rate so as to avoid an accumulation of an unnecessary surplus."

The change in the personal property tax on motor vehicles is designed to reach motorists who buy cars or bring them into the District after the taxing date of January 1. They would be required to pay on the portion of the year remaining on a pro rata basis.

Defend Whole Program

Defending the whole tax program, the investigators said:

"If the recommendations of this study are followed, taxes on real property, tangible personal property, public utilities, gasoline and motor vehicles, alcoholic beverages, banks, insurance companies, inheritance and estates will be equitably imposed

"The proposed personal income tax, while its maximum rate of 7 per cent is above the average, will not be as burdensome on middle-class incomes because of the high exemption of $14,000 for earned income.

Tax Not Burdensome

"The income from investments will be taxable in amounts above $500, but this will be far less severe than the intangibles tax has been."

It cannot be claimed that the poor man will pay a materially higher percentage of his income in retail sales taxes, since food and the other items for which he spends a disproportionately large share of his income are not included in the tax base. . . .

"If the tax is not burdensome upon an individual or corporation, even though it may represent differential taxation . . . it will not be a potent factor in causing him or it to alter business suits or to change residence.

"The rates which have been proposed for the new District taxes are moderate. Moreover, in Virginia and Maryland both States have income taxes with lower rates, but tax intangibles.

After citing comparative figures as to State and local taxes paid by corporations in Maryland and Virginia as contrasted with District taxes, the report comments that the difference is not alarming and that "District taxes will increase anyway and the ability theory needs recognition."

Women Democrats Urge President Serve 6-Year Term

New York, Jan. 16.—Denouncing a third term for President as an open door to dictatorship, the Women's National Democratic Club today unanimously adopted resolutions urging Congress to submit a constitutional amendment making the Presidential term six years, prohibiting re-election.

The women called upon President Roosevelt to put "his power and influence" behind the proposed amendment.

Douglas Fairbanks Wins Tax Skirmish

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court reversed previous action yesterday and agreed to review a contention by Douglas Fairbanks, motion picture actor and producer, that he should not pay the Federal Government $72,185 and interest as additional income taxes.

On October 10, the high tribunal refused to pass on Fairbanks' appeal from an adverse decision by the Ninth Circuit Court in California. Today it granted a petition for reconsideration.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Annabella Joins List Of Visiting Stars

Young French Actress to Be Here January 30; Jean Renoir Completes Filming Zola Story; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

BECAUSE it is the prevalent and slightly annoying custom of French motion picture stars to trademark their personalities by a single name, she is known to American audiences only as Annabella. If you must know, her last name is Carpentier. That may be altered by certain legal procedures before long, but at the moment the charming young woman is Mme. Carpentier to her family and intimates.

BELL

This is important at the moment, only because Annabella is the latest of the West Coast screen luminaries to avow her intention of being present at the President's Birthday Celebrations, scheduled for the night of Monday, January 30. She joins Olivia de Havilland and George Brent, of the Warner Brothers' studios, as among the first to accept the entertainment committee's invitation to be present on this gala occasion. It is due to the interest and cooperation of Darryl Zanuck, vice president in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox Films, that she will be able to be here.

Annabella enjoys an odd distinction. She came to America to make a French version of "Cavalcade" and then returned to Europe to make English versions of hits like "Wings of the Morning," "Dinner at the Ritz" and "Under the Red Robe." Her first American film of note was "The Baroness and the Butler," in which her strong French accent militated vaguely against fullest appreciation of her manifold talents by the American public—a handicap that has been completely overcome as time and study have gone on, as was evidenced by her practically accentless performance with Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and the all-star cast assembled by Mr. Zanuck for "Suez."

What Is All This Talk, Anyway?

There is, of course, a romantic implication in the association of the names of Annabella and Tyrone Power. They recently made a South American tour during which all sorts of rumors became rampant as to just what it was all about as far as the two of them were personally concerned. That is a matter that has not been conclusively determined, even yet. Perhaps time will tell, as it always has semed to have a peculiar finality in doing.

In the meantime, it is enough to know that Annabella will add youth, beauty, "glamour"—I still hate that word—and vivacity to a series of celebrations that a great many Washingtonians will wish to enjoy.

There is something more than the mere matter of enjoyment involved. The underlying purpose of the President's Birthday activities is one of such fine humanitarianism that no one ought to be able to consider it lightly as anything but an opportunity to participate in the consummation of a great work that will salvage many lives.

The gratitude of the entertainment committee goes out to the Hollywood stars who are so enthusiastically responding to its invitations to have a part in a magnificent work of human kindness.

While we are on this topic of visiting stars for the night of the thirtieth, the list of those who will be in Washington on that date steadily mounts. Hollywood will be extremely well represented by a group of distinguished screen artists who should enlist the interest of every "star-gazer" and practically throw the autograph-hounds into a dither—whatever that is. Presumably it is something that autograph-hounds are thrown into.

Mr. Selznick Finally Names His Scarlett

There is, as was to have been expected, great excitement all over the place as a result of David O. Selznick's final announcement of the actress who will portray the role of Scarlett O'Hara in his long-projected picturization of Margaret Mitchell's novel of "Gone With the Wind." A great many with whom I have discussed the subject seem to think that Mr. Selznick is just a little crazy. I wouldn't be too sure about that.

At least, the evidence of Mr. Selznick's earlier enterprises in the cinema is all in his favor. He is one producer who has made very few mistakes, either in the choice of the subject matter he has chosen to bring to the screen or in the manner of his casting. Look casually over a list of his major undertakings for corroboration. I do not recall that there was anything very seriously wrong with such pictures as "David Copperfield," "Dinner at Eight," "Dancing Lady," "Viva Villa," "Reckless," "Anna Karenina." "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "A Star Is Born," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and all of the other illustrious contributions he has made to the better records of the Hollywood studios. He may be right in the case of "Gone With the Wind."

Vivien Leigh, the young English actress selected for the role of Scarlett, will have some serious obstacles to hurdle in the matter of public favor, especially in the South. But Miss Leigh more than once has proved herself a competent and engaging actress. It is not impossible that she might acquire a Dixie accent that will be satisfactory to all concerned and baffle the critically minded just as Norma Shearer did when nobody much thought she was "up to" "Strange Interlude," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Marie Antoinette."

But there are other considerations involved of which the American lay public knows nothing—or virtually nothing. They have to do with international relationships, foreign quotas and many others of the motion picture industry's intricate and perplexing problems.

It might turn out that Mr. Selznick has been very smart. Then, of course, it might not. That remains to be seen. Personally, I thought Miss Leigh a very charming young person with Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford." As has been remarked here so many times before, we shall see what we shall see. It may not be so bad.

The Comets to Go Soaring Away

Next week, much to the consternation of the youngsters who now occupy what used to be known as the "baldheaded row," will mark the final appearance of the 24 Chester Hale Capitol Comets on the stage of the F street house, at least for a period of weeks. This long line of graceful, scrupulously trained and often cutaneous young women could give anyone—and I would not be sure that West Point's drill-masters ought to be excepted—a lesson in the art of precision, co-ordination and an amazing esprit de corps. They are, to be sure, a "leggy" crowd, but they have learned to put their legs to artistic uses that few other ensemble units have been able even remotely to approximate. It will be too bad to see them go.

Jean Renoir, director of the prize-winning French picture, "Grand Illusion," now on view for the second time at the Belasco Theater, has completed the filming of his next production. This is "The Human Beast," adapted from the novel by Emile Zola, who, himself, has not been ignored by the cinema's capacity for bringing great personalities back to life.

Jean Gabin, who plays one of the stellar roles with Eric Von Stroheim, Pierre Fresnay and Dita Parlo in "Grand Illusion," again is the star of Renoir's picturized Zola fiction. Simone Simon, who, not so long ago, left Hollywood in a huff, appears opposite Gabin in "The Human Beast."

And now, it appears, the feminine star of a film that was supposed to be a foreordained "dud"—and, for one, I shall never comprehend why—seems in line for an academy award for one of the finest film performances of the year. She is Wendy Hiller, who plays opposite Leslie Howard in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's release of the celluloid version of George Bernard Shaw's admirable comedy of "Pygmalion." Not having seen the picture, but reposing large confidence in the judgment of those who have, I should say that this should be not seriously out of line. If the award is made, Mrs. Pat Campbell ought to be immensely interested in it. She played the role on the stage of the National Theater a quarter-century or more ago.

That flawless series of ten brilliant, cameo-cut vignettes from the 60-year reign of Victoria, beloved Queen of Great Britain and Empress of India, known to all the lovers of the best in the theater as night to the scene of its first-night "Victoria Regina," returned last night to the scene of its first-night triumph in the National Theater and laid new emphasis upon all of the virtues that have stamped it one of the classics of the modern theater.

With Helen Hayes continuing in the title role and only a few minor substitutions in the original cast, and, furthermore, with a production as fresh and imposing as might be expected at any premiere performance, "Victoria Regina," three years after its inaugural, re-crates an indelible impression of thoughtful, illuminating and inspired "theater."

The ten vividly etched episodes from the life of Victoria, the Prince Consort and the historical figures of their court, comprise the dramatically forceful and authentic scenes into which the three acts of Laurence Housman's play have been divided. They do not, in the usual sense, contribute to a sustained narrative, dedicated to the humor, romance and conflict of a closely articulated "plot," but offer a mosaic of the salient incidents and events that marked the highlights of the rule of a sovereign who for more than half a century stood supreme among the world's most powerful monarchs.

Is Unique Among Plays

"Victoria Regina," for this very reason, is unique among the masterpieces of the stage. It creates a closely knit composite of divergent periods in the life of a revered queen that somehow contrive to achieve a unity of mood, purpose and effect, that is infinitely interesting and moving. This is principally due, of course, to the transcendent skill with which Miss Hays is able to differentiate and distinguish the variegated character of events in the life of Victoria from that daybreak in 1837, when she was apprised of her accession to the throne, to the even more glorious day in 1897, when, an aged woman in a wheelchair, she received the adulation of her children, her grandchildren and the people of her far-flung empire. Miss Hayes accomplishes these successive transitions with a consummate command of all the arts of the actress that embraces every capricious mood, a constantly mounting sense of imperial power and the increasingly poignant reflection of a supreme and unwavering devotion to the alien prince who was her understanding, considerate and sustaining helpmeet through the most trying years of her reign.

Half of this superlative capturing of the significant aspects of an epochal lifetime on a throne reposes in the adeptness with which Werner Bateman, in the role of Albert, the Prince Consort, is able to catch the spirit of the scenes and adapt his conspicuous talents to their intelligent and convincing depiction on the stage. Mr. Bateman was not seen in the part when "Victoria Regina" first was presented in Washington three years ago, but no close observer last evening was able to detect in his performance any lack of those sterling qualities that made the character memorable in the hands of Vincent Price upon the occasion of the play's American premiere.

A usual custom of singling out specific scenes that seem more impressive than any of the others is defeated in any contemplation of the instant play by reason of the amazing uniformity in merit, balance and deftness in interpretation revealed in the entire gallery of ten playlets that are so miraculously woven into a smooth-flowing and continuously fascinating exhibit of the theater's finer arts.

Every Scene Unforgettable

Perhaps the interlude in which Victoria proposes to Albert, after a humorously unconventional wooing; the one in which she insists on driving in the park, knowing that she is to be shot at by a potential assassin; the petulant episodes in which a quick and fiery jealousy and an immediately humbling humility evade serious domestic rifts, and the one in which Albert brings on his death by penning the document that is to prevent war between England and the United States by a shrewd and kindly diplomacy, and the last-act episodes at Balmoral Castle and Buckingham Palace will linger longest in many minds. The whole play, for the matter of that, is unforgettable.

The roster of players lending their energies and their nicely balanced talents to the eminence of an unusual work is long and contains the name of none who mars the perfect picture of an epoch that "Victoria Regina" presents. Among them, Alexander Clark, as Prince Ernest; Pamela Henry-May, as Lady Muriel; Augusta Roeland, as Lady Jane; Abraham Sofaer, as Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, and James Gibson, as that enigma of the Scottish Highlands, John Brown, are outstandingly efficient in the discharge of their important duties.

"Victoria Regina" was triumphant on its first night at the National, it was a sheer tour de force again last night and will continue to be one of the gems of the contemporary theater as many times as Mr. Gilbert Miller may see fit to bring it back here and Miss Hayes may see fit to play it.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 16.—I never hugged the history of Jesse James to my bosom, so I don't know if the story on the screen is entirely authentic. But I do know it's one of the most exciting pictures I've ever seen. And the color is glorious. They were so right to go back to Missouri and get that change of scenery, which is spectacularly beautiful. The only drawback is that the faces are so lovely it's difficult to realize the people who own them are actually suffering. That's the danger of color!

HEDDA HOPPER

Little Nancy Kelly does a remarkable job and is the answer to that oft-repeated question, "Do people need training before coming to the screen?" Nancy started when she was 4, and now, at 17, gives an emotional performance hard to equal. For sheer naturalness, Henry Fonda and Randy Scott are hard to beat. Ty Power didn't seem to wind up until the middle of the picture, but when he got going, he went to town. And whenever they needed a laugh, Henry Hull was the handy man. Henry King can take plenty of bows on this one.

Willie Wyler, being interviewed for a big magazine, couldn't find a snazzy basis for a new kind of spiel until finally the interviewer asked: "Well, what kind of chiseling irks you most?"

Willie spoke right up and said: "My brother. He makes it his business to find out when my paycheck arrives. But the thing that irks me most is his wearing my best clothes for his best girl."

A well-known German director who was trying to promote Leni Riefenstahl sought three publicity agents in town—each one turned it down.

A New England farmer, uncle of Willie K. Howard, came down to New York to see Willie and the sights. He took in everything and eventually got around to Radio Music Hall. Willie watched for reactions, like a fond mother looks for the first sign of talent in her offspring. After the orchestra had come up from the basement and disappeared, a regiment of female legs waved in the breeze. Uncle, apparently bored, suddenly showed signs of interest. Gazed around the place, then leaned over to Willie and whispered: "Gee whiz. What a place this would be to hold my hay."

Did you know that Disney did the voice of the matador (who had the daisy on his chest) in "Ferdinand the Bull?" And T-Hee, one of his Chinese animators, drew the five men behind the wall who came to look Ferdinand over!

Sally Eilers, just off the train from New York, saw the following sign over an empty motion picture theater: "Censors no longer bother us, thank goodness!"

Plentiful Crops Put Good Food In Relief Homes

U. S. Unable to Find Better Way to Get Rid Of Farm Surpluses

Washington's relief families are eating better than they have for seven years, thanks to bountiful farm crops and the inability of the Department of Agriculture to figure out anything better to do with some of the largest surpluses this Nation has ever known.

Vitamins A, B and C are becoming important items on all relief menus as the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation concentrates on a speed-up program designed to empty Government warehouses of huge holdings, and at the same time not disrupt the "normal" market. Peaches, peas, prunes, lima beans, raisins, butter and citrus fruits galore are now commonplace on tables that for a long time had known little more than bread, hunks of meat and dried beans.

2,000,000 Pounds Distributed

More than 2,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs will be issued to local families free this month in "balanced" quantities worked out by the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics. In December, which was a super-record month up to that time, 1,500,000 pounds were given away to 11,505 families—7,819 of them certified for WPA jobs and 3,324 of them on direct relief.

From the distribution depot at 615 D street southwest, families with 11 or more members are now taking home such loads as 6 pounds of prunes, 20 pounds of cabbage, 8 packages of whole wheat cereal, 10 cans of milk, 7 packages of butter, 16 cans of grapefruit juice, 14 cans of peas, 4 pounds of lima beans, 4 pounds of raisins, 30 pounds of corn meal, and 73½ pounds of wheat flour.

In the proposed District budget for this year, allotment of funds for the distribution project is upped from $20,000 to $30,000—looking toward a more liberal apportioning, and possibly the bringing of other than relief clients within the scope of the gift. Department of Agriculture experts have reckoned that as high as two-thirds of the Nation's families should have their diet supplemented, either in quantity or quality, and some have advocated taking more families into the gift or lower-price ring.

Garments Given Away

In addition to foods, the distribution depot workers give out about 1,000 garments a month made in WPA sewing rooms in Washington and now are adding to these at the rate of about 4,000 a week to get rid of the 12,000 garments bought up in December. Cotton goods also are in for an even bigger increase—as the Government starts giving away part of the 14,000,000-bale surplus, the largest in history.

An additional idea of the surplus problem, when fitted into the national picture, is seen in the fact that relief families now are getting plenty of butter, comparatively speaking. The Commodity Credit Corporation, from which the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation "buys" most of its supplies, today is holding 99,795,783 pounds of butter. Also, an all-time record.

Veterans' Pay Immunity Challenged in Court

The immunity of veteran's disability pay vanishes when he puts the money in the bank for business purposes, Attorneys Louis M. Dent and Thomas S. Jackson told the Court of Appeals yesterday, for United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co.

The bank in 1931 paid $11,688.39 to Ashby Williams, a lawyer. He never repaid the money and the bank attached $53.90 he had on deposit in another bank. Williams asked for his money back because it was part of his retirement pay.

$104,000 of Wardman's Taxes Disallowed

The Court of Appeals yesterday disallowed $104,000 in taxes levied by the District against furnishings, accounts and other personal property owned by the late Harry Wardman, real estate magnate.

The court sustained the claim of Julius I. Peyser and Joseph P. Tumulty, receivers of Wardman Real Estate Properties, that the tax bill was void for lack of a proper assessment. Numerous other properties here were said to be affected by the ruling.

Lyddane Sues Wife Once Held In Conspiracy to Murder Him

MRS. ANNE LYDDANE

Divorce Plea Charges Blond Anne Deserted Him After He Stood by Her During Two Trials

Francis (Slom) Lyddane, of Rockville, yesterday sued his golden-haired wife, Anne, of Washington, for absolute divorce, thereby writing the epilogue to one of the most fantastic murder conspiracy trials in the history of this section of the country.

Lyddane filed the suit in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, alleging his wife deserted him more than three years ago.

On April Fool's Day, 1935, Mrs. Lyddane, 29-year-old bank secretary was arrested in Rockville and later indicted on charges of hiring Washington gangsters to murder her husband, and also Mrs. Josephine Beall, wife of Arthur Beall, Darnestown, Md., garage owner. Police charged that behind the plot was her desire to have Beall for herself.

Lyddane, then clerk in the Montgomery County liquor dispensary, announced that he would stand by his wife. He did—through two trials. He heard her admit on the witness stand that she had been "indiscreet" with Arthur Beall, and heard a private detective testify to watching her and Beall keep a tryst in a church cemetery.

The first trial, held in Rockville in June, 1935, ended in a 6-6 hung jury. The case was transferred to Hagerstown, where, on May 22, 1936, a jury of farmers, laborers and clerks, agreeing with Mrs. Lyddane's argument that she was the victim of an underworld "blackmail plot," voted acquittal.

Lyddane was not in the courtroom when the verdict was returned. Afterward Mrs. Lyddane was asked if she planned to live with him again.

"I hope to," she said.

The divorce suit was filed yesterday by "Slom's" cousin, Attorney Kenneth Lyddane, who helped defend Anne at the two trials.

Traffic Offender Fights Extradition

Justice Letts yesterday granted a temporary writ of habeas corpus to Corbin Shield, who claimed his extradition to Maryland to face charges of traffic law violation was unconstitutional.

T. Edward O'Connell, attorney for Shield, contended that traffic violations are not crimes and that the law does not permit a man to be surrendered on such minor charges.

Fletcher Starts 60-Day Jail Term

Edmond C. Fletcher, disbarred former assistant to the Attorney General, last night started in the District Jail the 60-day term for illegal entry he had fought off for 16 months.

Justice O'Donoghue dissolved the writ of habeas corpus under which Fletcher had been free on bond since the Supreme Court ruled against him early in December.

Fletcher was convicted on September 29, 1937, of unlawfully entering a Military road house on which the Federal Home Loan Bank board had foreclosed.

Bar Association To Elect Today

The District Bar Association will hold its annual election of officers at the District Courthouse from noon to 6 p. m. Ballot boxes will be set up in the annex of the Bar Association library. More than 1,000 lawyers are expected to vote. Results will be announced at the January meeting of the association at the Mayflower tonight.

Hulls to Be Guests At Film Society Show

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull will be guests of the Film Society of Washington tomorrow night at a showing of "Song of China," a motion picture written and produced entirely by Chinese. Victor Kwong, attache of the Chinese Embassy, will speak and two Chinese short subjects will be shown.

3 Face Life Terms In Holdup Death; Case to Jury Today

Three men accused of accidentally killing their companion in a robbery yesterday lost a motion for a directed acquittal of murder charges and Assistant District Attorney Krouse demanded life imprisonment. The case will go to the jury today.

Krouse arraigned Leroy Evans, 19; George Molloy, 19, and James D. Posey, 20, as "public enemies, who did not work yet rode about armed, brawling and drinking beer."

Posey claimed his confession was changed by police officers. It said the three men went with George E. Sanford, 20, to rob a colored man, picked up Thomas Giles, colored, and fought with him. Posey and Evans admitted, it was said, that Evans was beating Giles on the head with a gun when it fired, fatally wounding Sanford.

Britain And Japan

Great Britain's latest note to Tokyo makes it clear that the United States is not alone in its opposition to Japan's treaty smashing course in China.

The London government, like our own, is utterly unwilling to accept the Japanese contention that the Nine Power Treaty has become obsolete and, therefore, no longer binding on the island empire. If the situation in the Far East has been altered, the British note points out, this alteration is the result of actions by Japan in contravention of the terms of this treaty. Great Britain, therefore, has no intention of recognizing changes in the Far Eastern status quo which are brought about by force.

The importance of this stand by the British government is twofold. In the first place, it reveals a very decided stiffening in the British attitude since the early months of the undeclared war. One need only contrast the present note with the weak and relatively harmless protests addressed to Tokyo at the time of the machine gunning of Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British Ambassador to China, to see how striking is the change that has come over London in its attitude toward Japan. But of more immediate significance is the fact that the British stand parallels the stand already taken by the United States. A similar stand by France is now assured.

To be sure, Great Britain has no intention, no more than has the United States, of using force to restrain Japan from establishing a Japanese-Manchukuoan-Chinese bloc in which, as the British note declares, "supreme authority will be vested in Japan." However, the Western powers are not entirely helpless as against Japan. Acting individually or in concert, they are in a position to deprive Japan of the foreign exchange and the raw materials without which she could only continue her war in China with great difficulty. And they can also, if they are driven to it, give China that help she needs to continue her resistance to Japan.

During recent weeks steps have been taken in Washington and London in the direction of both of these types of defensive action. Further such measures will undoubtedly be taken in the future, unless Japan shows a greater solicitude than she has hitherto displayed toward foreign interests in China. And with her armies bogged down on the mainland, Japan is even less able to retaliate than she was heretofore. After 18 months, the Western powers have abandoned the policy of folded hands for one of active defense of their threatened interests in the Far East.

The South's Renaissance

Numerous plans for rehabilitation of the South will probably be formulated during the next few years. President Roosevelt's interest in that region as "the Nation's No. 1 economic problem" and the report of the National Emergency Council have brought a new awareness of long neglected problems. Many useful suggestions will be offered, but comprehensive solutions are scarcely to be anticipated.

Twenty-nine Southern leaders have come forward with a program that will be useful in stimulating thought and further investigation. They suggest expansion of the Government's rehabilitation efforts in agricultural areas, Federal aid for local health programs, Federal funds to equalize educational opportunities among the States, elimination of freight-rate differentials, abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite of voting and adequate guarantees for the rights of labor.

Press reports of this group's conclusions indicate that it relies rather heavily upon Federal aid. In many respects the Federal Government can undoubtedly render valuable assistance in the South's struggle against poverty and disease. But legislation passed in Washington is not likely to be the major factor in lifting the South out of its sorry plight.

As pointed out by the National Emergency Council, the South is rich in natural resources and poor in the necessities of life. The core of its problem seems to be intelligent utilization of its resources and development of new industries. Both the Federal and State Governments may assist these developments in some degree. But ultimately they depend upon the vision, industry and organization of the people of the South.

It may be, therefore, that the most significant aspect of the present movement is the stimulus which it has given to civic and economic leadership in the South. If the people come to realize more keenly the deficiencies of their standard of living, the first step toward improvement will have been taken. And if that intensified interest leads to careful study of specific problems and organized efforts to solve them, President Roosevelt's challenge to the South should bring gratifying results.

The Report On Relief

After studying the subject carefully for 17 months, after taking testimony from many sources and examining the way in which other democracies handle the problem, the Senate Committee empowered to investigate unemployment and relief has issued its final report. The document takes rank as a great state paper, not the less so for its brevity and the simplicity of its approach.

Unification of administration is the keynote of the report, the means whereby the committee proposes to disentangle and co-ordinate the incredibly complicated network of overlapping social service agencies which have been established under the New Deal. This approach is as important from the viewpoint of economy as from that of efficiency. "By the merging of organizations engaged in the same work," the committee emphasizes, "great savings can be effected in administration costs."

The basic deficiency of the present system is clearly recognized in the current report. Under WPA there has been no careful restriction of work relief to those who are without other means of support. As a result of this situation, plus the high wages paid on relief projects, there has been developed a favored class of unemployed who obtain a "security wage" from WPA, supplementing it if they want by part-time work for private employers. The growth of a form of unionization among WPA workers is itself an indication of the privileged position which these recipients of Federal bounty have come to assume they possess.

The present situation is undesirable because it encourages those on WPA roles to assert a vested interest in perpetuating extravagant relief work. It is even more undesirable because WPA, even on the past scale of appropriations, cannot provide jobs for all the unemployed. The indigent unemployment left off the rolls are, therefore, the more discriminated against because of the favoritism extended to those employed on Federal projects. The attractiveness of WPA, furthermore, makes its beneficiaries particularly susceptible to political pressure, and thereby encourages the scandals which are now common knowledge.

By cutting the WPA appropriation drastically Congress is taking the first step towards improvement of the present wholly undesirable procedure. The contribution of the Byrnes committee lies in its thoughtful suggestions as to what should be done in a positive way to organize relief work on a comprehensive, permanent and constructive basis.

The first step, the committee points out, is to make certain that none get relief work because they have no liking for regular employment. To accomplish this end it is necessary that every unemployed worker should register at the labor exchanges now established throughout the Nation under the general supervision of the United States Employment Service. At these labor exchanges, if employers give their essential co-operation, will be listed all available jobs in private industry. At the exchange, therefore, the test of willingness to work can be given in practical form. This procedure, incidentally, would automatically furnish current and reliable statistics on unemployment, both local and national.

The registered unemployed for whom no openings exist will fall into three divisions. The first will be composed of able-bodied workers drawing unemployment insurance benefits in virtue of contributions paid during past employment. If adequate benefits are paid promptly, through the employment exchange, these insured workers will be temporarily cared for. While in receipt of unemployment insurance no unemployed person, of course, should be allowed on the relief rolls, at the expense of those who have no form of support.

The second class of registered unemployed unable to obtain jobs will be the physically incapacitated. For these special assistance has been provided in old-age pensions, aid to the blind and other forms of social security. Where this type of assistance is adequate its beneficiaries should also be rigidly excluded from work-relief.

The public works program, in other words, should be carefully restricted to those able-bodied unemployed who have no other form of relief and who can demonstrate their willingness to accept normal employment whenever available at standard wage rates. For this large group the Byrnes committee advocates the development of a single public works program, merging the now overlapping and duplicating activities of PWA and WPA, and also taking control over the work of the CCC and NYA.

This program, it believes, should be under a Federal department of public work which would plan its activities in advance, but in such a way that the program could be quickly expanded or contracted. This new department would work in co-operation with local bodies, sharing the expense in the proportion of two-thirds from the Federal and one-third from the local government, the latter share subject to reduction in the case of the poorer States. Presumably the proposed Department of Public Works would also take direction of the National Resources Committee, which is doing valuable work in planning long-range public work projects in conjunction with State, county and municipal authorities.

Whether employment on public works would or could be made available for all the unemployed not covered by the social security program is not clear from the report of the Byrnes committee. On this, and on many less important details, the report is obviously open to criticism and improvement. That does not detract from its essential value in proposing logical action for bringing the present relief muddle under intelligent control. As the committee says: "As long as we regarded unemployment as an emergency problem we could excuse the continuance of emergency agencies. There is now a necessity for a co-ordinated program."

The essentials of such a program, which the Administration has failed to propose, is now placed before Congress by a Senate committee which has shown intelligence, insight and assiduity in its vitally important task.

80 Billions Or Bust

Senator Byrd has rendered a national service by turning the cool light of analysis on the Eccles spending policy. It is all too frequently taken for granted that an outpouring of public funds is necessarily a stimulus to prosperity. Official Washington has been all too reluctant to consider the ultimate effects of continuously borrowing money to create purchasing power.

Mr. Byrd's letter was written in reply to an epistle addressed to him by Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve System. But he is not pursuing an unprofitable dispute between two individuals. The spending theory which he subjects to withering criticism has been adopted by the Administration. So, in a larger sense, the Byrd letter may be regarded as a reply from the independent legislators in Congress to the President's proposal that balancing of the budget be postponed until the Nation has attained an annual income of $80,000,000,000.

In his letter to Senator Byrd, Mr. Eccles pointed out that the total volume of public and private indebtedness is no greater today than it was in 1929. While the public debt has greatly increased, private debts have correspondingly shrunk. To this Mr. Byrd aptly replies that private debts frequently represent financing the production of durable goods. Public debts, on the contrary, are quite as frequently a dead weight on the backs of taxpayers.

The Eccles theory recognizes only one part of the cycle set in motion by an outpouring of public money. It emphasizes the purchasing power created by deficit financing and assumes that this increased spending will automatically lead to greater industrial activity and more extensive employment. The inevitable reactions—higher taxes and justified uncertainty as to financial stability—are conveniently forgotten.

Senator Byrd points out that taxes, which in 1929 took 12 per cent of our national income, now take 20.6 per cent. In spite of that heavy burden deficit financing will continue for the tenth consecutive year. "Government extravagance," the Senator properly warns, "has become habitual." As hope of returning to a sound fiscal policy becomes more remote the stimulative effect of governmental spending is necessarily weakened. For distrust of the future is magnified along with the mounting public debt.

In these circumstances there is good reason for Senator Byrd's belief that "for every dollar the Government borrows and spends in pump-priming, private enterprise is deterred from spending two." If our national income is to be raised to $80,000,000,000, the gains will have to come largely from increased production. But the psychological effect of the Administration's new slogan, "80 billions or bust," is to discourage production. The effect of stepping on the accelerator and applying the brake simultaneously is simply a waste of gasoline.

Why should the United States spend a billion dollars on defense as long as it has Harold Ickes and his vocabulary?

Proletarian Simplicity

From Moscow, Paris; translated in Living Age.

The huge 16-foot model of the Palace of Soviets, now under construction in Moscow, which is to be exhibited in the Soviet pavilion at the forthcoming international exhibition in New York, was discussed recently at a conference in the offices of the Russian Precious Stones Trust in Leningrad.

The metal framework of the model is to be faced with Ural jasper, Beloretsk quartz, emeralds, rubies, golden topaz and other precious stones. Topping the model will be a figure of Lenin in stainless steel. One of the sides of the model will be open.

A 600-foot mosaic panel depicting the Stalinist Constitution is also being constructed for the exhibition. The text of the principal articles of the constitution will be inscribed in precious stones on a mosaic background made from Ural stones. Other compositions in preparation by the trust are a large emblem of the Soviet Union and eleven emblems of the Union republics from topaz, rubies, sapphires and emeralds, as well as a bas-relief of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin.

Group Health Doctors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In connection with the rather elaborate front-page story you gave regarding Dr. Price's alleged reasons for resigning from Group Health Association, Inc., it seems rather odd to me that the complaint does not come from the patients rather than from the doctors.

I have been a member of the group for some time. But at first I made no call upon its physicians perhaps largely because we had a satisfactory family doctor. He proved so elusive and inaccessible, however, and he was so terribly busy, that we were finally forced to call upon the group doctors. This family doctor always had herds of patients in his office ready to go through the mill and he simply found it impossible to keep up with his necessary house calls; often it would be a day or so before you could get hold of him.

The three times I have asked house calls from group doctors they came within three to four hours. Whether in the home or in the clinic I have found them very satisfactory. This includes Dr. Price, who certainly did not give my wife careless treatment or lax attention. Since the group doctors attain a certain level of competence in their profession, I do not see that it has been objectionable that the same doctor who saw the patient in the clinic did not make the house calls. In fact, three different doctors made the house calls, but they were all satisfactory; each one knew the patient's history, and the patient had the added advantage of medical consultation at no extra charge.

I think Dr. Price, in particular, does himself scant justice for his statement implies that his own work was hurried and unsatisfactory due to pressure of the "herd." On the contrary we found it the exact reverse. It is unfortunate he chose this particular time to kick the group smartly in the face. But I believe the group will survive nevertheless because I think its fundamental principle sound.

Taunts From A Fascist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It might interest your readers to know what an Italian Fascist actually thinks about those vague conceptions so often mentioned in your press under the name of American ideals, "our form of government," the peace loving nations, the American way, etc. First of all, I will say that it gives me a pain to meet these old outworn phrases on every line of your newspapers, yet I cannot at the same time keep from pitying you.

Your "form of government" (form of confusion) reminds me of a car loaded with ten people all with their hands on the steering wheel and all wanting to go to a different place. If 44,000,000 Americans were put in Virginia and North Carolina (approximately the area of Italy) and told to do their stuff, how long would their "American way" last? You would die like fish on dry land. The Russian and Fascist systems have given better results than yours; you cannot laugh this off and the sooner you quit trying the better.

Living here is like a circus and I have no desire to go back. Example: Every four years you choose a driver for your car, then proceed to tie his hands, put him under the back seat and turn the steering wheel over to anyone who wants to grab it. Then, in order to raise the clownish feat to the heights of the ridiculous, a group of lunatics begin to shout that the driver, tied down under the back seat, is going to run the car into a ditch.

Another example: The actions of your President seem to be governed by fan mail as a rule. Three thousand Americans go to Spain to fight against our Duce; fan mail says it does not like Barcelona and Mr. President turns thumbs down on the very ones who, acting upon his suggestion, were going to help "quarantine the dictators." But of late fan mail has become lighter; American Catholics begin to think Franco is not so hot, so now it is rumored that the President may quit helping the Duce.

Felix Frankfurter

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to express my approval of the very recent appointment to the Supreme Court of Dr. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School.

There is small need for me to comment on the excellent character and ability of this great man. His work and his ideals have preceded him into the "court." His students and other disciples have built for him an enduring place in the scheme of the "New Enlightenment." Need I say that the world's best minds consider him the foremost authority of international and domestic law and relationship. Or are these facts too well known?

This man, indeed, has the stamp of the true liberal. One can almost see the beaming souls of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Holmes, Cardozo and countless other true Americans rejoicing in his recognition.

Yes, it was his philosophy that distinguished the men of the "New Deal" leadership, who studied from him and carried the lessons in their hearts and into their deeds.

The new principles of democracy and humanitarianism were the spirit and flame that lighted the way for the good ship "Democracy" through the darkness, storms and reefs, created and planted by her inherent ingrates. But even now she rides the conquered sea, with a willing crew; unto more splendid horizons, when the new era dawns, with holy glory and promise for the sons of "liberty."

I am proud to believe that Dr. Frankfurter will be a credit to the United States and the high standards of the late lamented Benjamin Cardozo, whose place he will so timely and adequately fill.

The President, brilliant statesman that he is, has chosen wisely and well once again. The appointee reflects the stature of the appointer; and the appointer the will of his appointer, freemen of America.

Such men as Dr. Frankfurter and the other gentlemen to whom the President has entrusted the highest honors and responsibilities of the republic are her greatest glory and safeguard.

Gur For Gehnra

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On the front page of this morning's Post you ask the question, What is Gur?

I lived four years in India and was very much intrigued by this myself and was surprised to learn upon referring to my Hindustani dictionary that it was merely "treacle," which my English dictionary refers to as just good, plain, old "molasses." I hope this may help Dr. Mann feed our new rhino. Incidentally, the Hindu calls the rhino "gehnra." H. B. WERNER.

The Lewis Report

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At last the findings of Mr. Burdette Lewis' investigation of Washington's relief set-up are being made public and, while the disclosures might seem startling, there are many citizens of this city who have been aware of these conditions for quite a while.

And whereas the average "outsider" has no direct proof of actual existence of "pressure groups," as charged by Mr. Lewis, there is proof that in numerous relief cases aid has been extended to those whose needs are far less acute than those to whom it was denied.

A case in example: A man and wife, average age about 60 years, denied relief because only daughter was earning $10 per week, while another aged couple was allowed from $20 to $25 cash allowance per month, living in home owned by daughter, who along with several other members of the same family, living in same house, had a combined income of over $300 per month.

And the actual conditions in each of these cases were so obvious that no possibility of doubt existed to mislead the case worker as to the individual merits of each case. Those receiving aid from the public assistance division, and having cause for complaint, have found out, all too well, that seeking to give charges of discrimination against any of those connected with some of the relief bureaus is only to jeopardize any chance that they might have of getting the aid they are seeking.

Speaking as a citizen who is familiar with certain problems pertaining to the Washington relief situation, I would, with humble apologies to the experts, like to submit the following suggestion:

(1) Create a standard set of rules as to the necessary qualifications for being eligible for the various forms of relief. At present there is too much choice as to who should, and who should not receive aid, left to the discretion of the case workers.

(2) Create an impartial board to receive and analyze complaints filed by relief clients. I admit there are many "cranks" who are always "squawking" about something. But there have been numerous cases where there was justification for fault-finding.

And last, but not the least, I have no complaint against any of the relief workers. They are human like the rest of us, and subject to the same mistakes as the average mortal.

Middies And Kisses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Will you kindly forward to Capt. Draemel, commandant of midshipmen, U. S. Naval Academy, the following observations about his order forbidding the kiss in the ring ritual, as the second classmen "marry" the Navy each year. (The Post, Sunday, January 7.)

Just what loss of dignity the academy, Capt. Draemel, or the midshipmen suffer, in publicy receiving the ritualistic kiss from their sweethearts during the ceremony, is beyond the scope of my intellect—thank Heaven! Furnishing, as it does, one of the highlights and one of the few emotional "escapes" from the rigors of Naval Academy training, I feel it should be preserved.

Perhaps Capt. Draemel suffers the illusion his decree will prevent culmination of the ritual. If so, he underestimates the resourcefulness of the midshipmen.

It is sincerely hoped the commandant will withdraw his order, restoring this and the color-presentation ceremony to their old manner which has never lost its emotional appeal for many who have witnessed it often.

Great Grief

MAJ. AUGUSTUS PARMENIDES NUTT occupies an inconspicuous place in society and seems to cultivate the reticent air of one who had always been protected from the harsher blasts of fate. That is the fact, in the main; but there was a time, in his salad days, when he delighted in mixing with the common herd and in gathering a few of the wild fruits and flowers growing by the wayside.

In the very old days it took about two bottles of port to open the sluices of Joe Addison's eloquence, but, the times have changed, and today the Major begins to spout after the second highball and is in full play by the end of the third. But, at that, some activation is needed to get him started.

A few nights ago someone mentioned Ernest Gerstenberg's place on E street, east of Fourteenth, as one place in town where, formerly, you could get imported Wertzburger, or a good local beer, on draft, properly cooled, and accompany it with real German food. That brought the veterans into action. Col. Jones spoke up:

"That was one place I liked to drop in from time to time. It was democratic to the nth degree. The poor and the rich met there upon a footing of exact equality. If your purse called for just beer and a sandwich, that was what you got, but it was real beer and a real sandwich. If you wished to spend more money you could have marinated herring, or a wiener schnitzel, or a steak smothered in onions or mushrooms, or whatever you liked; provided you did not ask for any Frenchified foolishness or sweets.

And it was well conducted. There were plain tables and no fancy floors; and no one ever "started anything" when husky Gerstenberg and his two big Danes were in evidence. Yes, sir, there was a haven of refuge for mere man, away from all ladyfied doings, where newspaper men politicians, sports, et id omne genera, collected."

"Ah! but Colonel, there were times when somebody 'started something' there, as I happen to know." It was Maj. Nutt who thus piped up. He cotinued:

"You see, I've always been a smallish man; not exactly undersized, you know; but at the lower end of average height and weight. But, even so, in my class I was a fairly good boxer, could hold my own with the average man in most exercises, and ranked well-up on cocked-hat. Well, there used to be a bowling alley just east of Gerstenberg's and a little closer to where The Post is now located, and one night after a good workout there I drifted into Gerstenberg's restaurant for a little restauration, the others staying on bowling.

"That was fairly early, about 10 p. m., and while there was no great crowd there the place was fairly well filled. I nodded to Otto, told Fritz to serve me a good, deep stein of Wertzburger, and passed on back into the rear dining room. All I wanted was the beer and a raw-beef-and-onion sandwich; and, seeing no one whom I knew, I took a table all by myself back in a corner.

"After a little wait the food and drink was placed before me and I proceeded to do it due honor. I was well along with this when some man-mountain whom I had not seen before loomed up with a face as round and red as a harvest moon, and, without preliminaries of any sort, announced: 'I can lick the everlasting stuffings out of anyone or all of you.'

"I can't state how this impressed the other diners, but I can tell you that as I surveyed his 6-foot 4 inches of bone and muscle I came to the conclusion that he had merely stated a mathematical fact and I was willing to concede victory to him without contest.

"Looking around for a means of escape I found none for me and determined to upset the table on him if he singled me out for his onslaught. Boy, when I looked again the whole back of the room had been vacated and there were only the man-mountain and poor little me in the place—Fritz and the bung-starter being too far away for comfort.

"Well, sir, I've never found out whether I am a physical coward, a plain fool, or a brave man; but I did the only reasonable thing I could think of under the circumstances and stood pat. I sat there quietly, sipping my beer; nonchalantly lighted a cigarette and cautiously eyed Mr. Man-Mountain while he sized up the empty room and me. Naturally, with all that heft he was a little slow of movement, and I hoped to be able to duck and evade him.

"Mr. Man-Mountain stood there a few minutes, a little unsteadily, and then moved slowly and uncertainly in my direction. I motioned to Fritz not to use the bung-starter though I hoped he would follow the bully up.

"Well, sir, the silence of the place seemed to sober the chap a bit and when he reached my table he sat down and blubbered:

"'They don't love me any more.'

"With that he collapsed in grief and I sneaked out. But I didn't feel quite well for a day or two."

The Murphy Appointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reference to the letter entitled, "The Murphy Appointment," in The Post, January 3, Mr. Partridge seems to forget the fact that members of the Cabinet are in no way construed to be representatives of the people. In my opinion the President should pick the men whom he believes the ablest and with whom he can work best. The people are certainly not the best judges of these qualities.

Furthermore, it must be remembered that the functions of the Cabinet are purely advisory — he may call for their advice twice a week, once a year, or not at all if he so desires.

For these reasons, I believe that a Cabinet member need not and should not be popularly acclaimed.

Job Trusts

MANY EMPHATIC ladies have filed dissenting opinions on the recent proposal in these dispatches that employers and politicians with appointive jobs to award avoid hiring women whose husbands are employed. The suggestion is treated as radical, even Hitleresque, in careless disregard of the fact that it would add nothing to the conditions of hire which already exist. In fact, there are existing conditions of eligibility imposed by some unions which are much more serious impairments of individual rights than the one proposed.

Employers in most lines already possess the right to select their employes and to discriminate without any obligation to explain matters to disappointed candidates. This right is being whittled down and eventually we may have a sort of civil service method of selection administered by labor organizations, possibly under Government supervision. But in lines in which workers are selected singly or in small numbers the boss still can pick his employe, and it may be that already some companies give preference to unmarried women or to married women who are supporting families.

The boss may—and one hears that he sometimes does—turn away applicants for reason of religion, personal appearance or personal disfavor. He may turn down a superior individual and hire a mediocrity merely because the lucky number has been sent by a big customer with a letter of recommendation, wrapped around a section of lead pipe. It is often done. There are many familiar stories of the person who caught on for no other reason than that the boss liked the cut of his jib or the color of her eyes.

THIS BEING SO—and surely nobody will deny that it is—the married woman whose husband has a job plainly would not be the victim of any new injustice. If it is unjust to permit the employer to give the job to a needier individual, that certainly does not come under the head of new business. True, that makes him the judge of need, but that is the way it is, nevertheless, and the way it has been always. Yet, if he can obtain reliable information which leads him to select the head of a dependent family or a single-handed individual who must have a job in order to live, rejecting a woman whose husband has a good job, that discrimination is less harsh than other kinds.

True, as a strict matter of justice, the married woman whose husband has a job has a right to work for luxuries or merely to accumulate savings if she can get the job. But if she can't get the job, has she been wronged, and, if so, whom should she sue about that? It appears that any legal protection of her right not to be discriminated against because of her economic status would require the services of another Government bureau to examine applicants for private employment and compel employers certified by an official administrator.

UNDER THE CLOSED shop and disguised closed shop agreements both men and women employes, regardless of qualifications, ability and need, may be blacklisted by unions which thus possess authority to issue or withhold licenses to work. This method creates job trusts in certain crafts which limit apprenticeships and close their rolls to new members, thus monopolizing the available work for a select number. It is also possible, with the aid of some union officials with political sympathies, to compel a reactionary Republican, for example, to join and pay dues to an organization which supports the New Deal and even to contribute money, through his dues, or work license fee, to a radical movement.

Such are restrictions and impositions already in practice, affecting both men and women, married and single, in harsh disregard for the rights and necessities of individuals who like to believe themselves free citizens. Thus the married woman whose husband has an adequate job may be disqualified for employment and denied her precious right to buy luxuries or save money merely because she refuses to contribute part of her earnings to a political movement which in her patriotic opinion is a threat against the peace and stability of the Nation.

The Sit-Down Issue

By Mark Sullivan

Credit Due Murphy

LAST WEEK, after a Senate sub-committee had passed favorably on the appointment of Mr. Frank Murphy to be Attorney General, he, without being under any requirement to do so, rather gallantly made a voluntary statement to the sub-committee. The statement explained his attitude toward sit-down strikes while he was Governor of Michigan. Some facts he brought out for the first time, and some expressions of principles held by him, justly offset some of the criticism to which he has been subjected.

Mr. Murphy defended himself. He did not defend the sit-down strike. On the contrary, Mr. Murphy said he opposes the sit-down strike. I quote:

"I do feel sure that the sit-down strike has now been thoroughly discredited and I believe we have seen the end of it, because it is an instrumentality that would undermine and destroy the vital right of the ownership and possession of private property—one of the main pillars upon which our form of economy and indeed our democracy is based."

THE LATTER PART of that statement amounts to saying that the sit-down strike would destroy the American form of society and government. That is what this column, and many persons, have said many times. We can give Mr. Murphy complete credit for holding this view—he is a sincere man.

The other part of Mr. Murphy's statement is that "the sit-down strike has been thoroughly discredited, and I believe we have seen the end of it." Again, we can take it completely for granted that Mr. Murphy sincerely believes what he says. Yet in an important sense, this part of Mr. Murphy's statement fails to take into account a material fact.

The sit-down strike cannot be said to be "discredited"—if it is not discredited by the Government of the United States. And the fact is the Government does not discredit the sit-down strike. On the contrary, the Government upholds it. On the very day Attorney General Murphy made his statement, another branch of the Government was arguing before the Supreme Court to uphold the sit-down strike, in one of the cases I describe below.

THE PART OF the Government which has official power to discredit the sit-down or uphold it, to end it or continue it, is the National Labor Relations Board. And the Labor Board is upholding the sit-down strike, upholding it vigorously, striving to preserve it as an instrumentality of labor relations.

The Labor Board upholds the sit-down strike in cases in which, as the board alleges, the employing corporation had been guilty of unfair labor practices. Even if the premise be granted that the employer was guilty of unfair labor practices, which in every case is a matter of dispute—even if that be granted, the position of the Labor Board must seem most extraordinary to as good a lawyer as Attorney General Murphy.

Among the sit-downs upheld by the Labor Board are two on which the board's position is especially startling. One was in the plant of the Fansteel Metallurgical Co. at Chicago, one in the plant of the Douglas Aircraft Co. at Santa Monica, Calif. In both these cases, sit-downers took and kept possession of plants. In both cases, the owners appealed to the courts. In both, officials of the law called upon the sit-downers to leave the plants. In both the sit-downers resisted and defied officials of the law, with some violence. In both cases, ultimately, the sit-downers were arrested, tried, convicted and fined or imprisoned.

IN BOTH CASES the plants, when they resumed operations, did not re-employ certain ones of the sit-downers. In both cases the sit-downers appealed to the National Labor Relations Board. In both cases, the Labor Board ordered the companies to reinstate some of the sit-downers.

In both cases, the employing companies appealed from the Labor Board's decision to the Federal courts. In the Fansteel case, a circuit court held against the Labor Board's decision. The Labor Board then appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the case now is. In the Douglas case, the employing company has recently appealed to a circuit court.

In both cases the Labor Board has striven to have the courts uphold its attitude—and thereby incorporate the sit-down into American law and practice. If the Labor Board is successful, if the sit-down is thus incorporated into law and practice, it would, to quote Gov. Murphy's words, "destroy the vital right of the ownership and possession of private property—one of the main pillars upon which our form of economy and indeed our democracy is based."

Since Attorney General Murphy holds the views here quoted from him, there is a way, I presume, by which he could make his position effective. I presume he could at once go before the courts in his official capacity, as the highest legal officer of the Government; he could intervene in these sit-down strike cases, and, on behalf of the Government, state that the Government holds the action and attitude of the Labor Board to be wrong.

Ruling Boosts 90,000 Steel Workers' Pay

Walsh-Healey Contract Act Invoked to Raise Wage Rates

By the United Press.

Acting Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin last night fixed four minimum Federal wage rates for the iron and steel industry in a decision which, officials said, means pay raises for thousands of steel workers and may be an effective bar to future wage cuts.

Acting under authority of the Walsh-Healey public contracts act, McLaughlin ruled that holders of Government contracts in excess of $10,000 must, after January 31, pay the following wage rates to common labor:

In 18 Northern States and the the District of Columbia, 62½ cents an hour.

In 11 Western States, 60 cents an hour.

In 13 Southern States, 45 cents an hour.

Labor leaders estimated that 90,000 of the 525,000 workers normally employed in the industry, will receive pay increases provided the steel companies abide by the order.

Bethlehem Steel must raise wages in 10 of its 12 plants if it desires to continue work on Government contracts.

Other major steel producers and the number of plants where they must raise wages to continue Government work are:

United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries — Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, American Steel & Wire Co., Columbia Steel Co., and Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.—at 11 of their 43 plants. Republic Steel Corporation at 4 of its 11 plants. Inland Steel Co. at 1 of its 2 plants.

30 Months Of War

By Barnet Nover

Last Round In Spain

THE SPANISH struggle has now been going on for exactly two and a half years. In that time the war has seemingly been won and lost many times. Yet, even now, with the nationalists in possession of Tarragona and no farther from Barcelona than Baltimore is from Washington, it would be rash to assume that the war is about over.

The war seemed to be won by the insurgents during the week-end of July 17 to 20, 1936. The uprising in Spanish Morocco on July 17, when a number of regiments under the command of Gen. Francisco Franco, took up arms against the republic, found an answering echo at many points on the mainland. Although a large part of the Spanish navy remained loyal to the constituted regime, the bulk of the army and the overwhelming majority of the officers sided with those seeking to overthrow the government. The jig appeared to be up for the Madrid regime.

WITHIN A WEEK, however, the tide turned. The Government succeeded in re-establishing its authority in Madrid. Barcelona and many other of the principal cities of Spain. Only Morocco, Navarre, traditional home of the Carlists, Galicia, part of Aragon, and a few other points remained in the hands of the nationalists.

By mid-July, therefore, it was apparent that the uprising, as a coup d'etat, had failed. But once Franco had succeeded in transferring part of his Moroccan force to the mainland, the picture again changed. That event marked the real beginning of the civil war. It meant that two armies were in a position to converge on Madrid, one from the north, the other from the south. And the progress of these armies, particularly the one from the south, which swept up from Andalusia, was so rapid that by the beginning of November Gen. Franco was hammering at the gates of Madrid. Again the war appeared to be about over.

MADRID held out. The siege of the old capital which began early in November, 1936, continues to this very day, but the struggle for possession of that city has been overshadowed during these last 26 months by the fighting that has raged elsewhere.

During 1937 the nationalists made very considerable military progress. Malaga was taken in February; Bilbao fell in July; Santander in August; Gijon soon after. All of western Spain was in the hands of the nationalists, and all of the Spanish coast from San Sebastian in the north almost to Almeria.

By December, 1937, therefore, the republican outlook had become depressing and, many believed, hopeless. Yet the taking of Teruel by the government forces late in that month showed that the nationalist predictions of imminent victory were still premature, to say the least.

TERUEL remained in loyalist hands only a brief while. Its recapture occurred at the beginning of a nationalist offensive which by March, 1938, had attained formidable dimensions. By April the assumption of a speedy victory for Gen. Franco was widespread and when on the eighteenth of that month, the insurgent generalissimo announced, "We have won the war," that statement did not appear to be an exaggeration. For by April his armies had swept down to the sea and cut loyalist Spain in two.

The Ebro offensive of the government, beginning in July, 1938, saved Valencia and saved the government as well. From midsummer of last year until late in December, the nationalists won no new territory from the government. It was the longest period of stalemate in the history of the Spanish civil war.

THAT STALEMATE has been broken. Despite counter-offensive efforts by the loyalists armies in Estramadura and elsewhere along the extended battle front, Gen. Franco has, during the last three weeks, made very considerable progress and gained much valuable territory. The Ebro front has been rolled up; a good part of Catalonia is now in Franco's hands and one of his generals has predicted that within a month the nationalists will be in Barcelona.

Should that occur, it is doubtful whether Madrid and Valencia could long hold out. But if, even at this eleventh hour, the loyalists manage to hold their ground, the ultimate outcome of this always unpredictable war will remain in doubt.

From the beginning, international factors have played at least as great a part in the struggle as purely Spanish factors. That remains true today. It is reported from Rome that in their recent conversations Il Duce told Prime Minister Chamberlain he has no intention of withdrawing Italian troops from Spain until Franco has won; that should France throw any large-scale support to the Barcelona regime, Italy would greatly increase her aid to the Burgos regime.

The warning is clear. But the prospect of a nationalist victory in Spain, won with the aid of Hitler and Mussolini, is unpalatable to many elements in France. Premier Daladier's own party, the Radical Socialists, has demanded that the French government take action to prevent a Franco victory is of potential significance. During the next weeks the decisions reached and the actions taken in Rome and Paris, in London and Berlin, may have an even more definite bearing on the outcome of the fighting in Spain than what is done in Barcelona and Burgos and along the far-flung battle line.

Today And Tomorrow

Mr. Murphy Tells His Story

ALTHOUGH NEARLY two years have passed since the sit-down strikes in the Michigan automobile plants, it was not until this week that the main truth has been told about Gov. Murphy's policy. The truth is for obvious reasons important. Yet, as I see it, the truth is substantially different both from what Mr. Murphy's critics and Mr. Murphy's partisan supporters seem to think it is.

REDUCED TO ITS barest essentials the facts that have to be recalled are these: At the end of December, 1936, a few days before Mr. Murphy was inaugurated as Governor of Michigan, there began a sit-down strike in some of the General Motors plants. The original position of the company was that while it would permit plant managers to discuss grievances with representatives of the workers, the central management of the company would not engage in collective bargaining. The original demand of the union was that it should be recognized as the sole bargaining agency of all the workers. The sit-down strike began, therefore, at a time when the company was denying the right of collective bargaining and the union, which had never faced an election of the employes, was claiming not only the right of collective bargaining but the right to be treated as the only agent entitled to bargain.

These positions were so hopelessly far apart that for a month, the month of January, 1937, there was a deadlock. The plants were occupied by the sit-down strikers and violence was increasing. During this period the only hope of a negotiated settlement lay in persuading the management to give way by consenting to negotiate and in persuading Mr. Lewis and the union to give up the claim to be the exclusive agent of the employes.

The company was the first to give way. It announced its willingness to negotiate provided the plants were evacuated. The strikers, on the other hand, refused to evacuate unless the C. I. O. union was recognized as sole bargaining agent.

IT WAS AT this point in the deadlock that the company, which had obtained injunctions but not enforcing orders, reluctantly applied to the courts for an order which would invoke force to evacuate the plants. The reluctance of the General Motors Co. is understandable. The company officials realized that the forcible ejection of the strikers might mean bloodshed, and no company, especially one engaged in competition to sell cars to workingmen all over the country, could fail to shrink from the prospect of bloodshed in the plants. There was no strike at this time, we must remember, in Ford or in Chrysler, so General Motors would have borne the whole commercial consequences. That fact, plus the humane sentiments of the management and of the principal local stockholders, undoubtedly explain why the company tolerated the sit-down for nearly a month before applying to the courts for an order which invoked force.

When they did finally go to the courts, they accompanied this action by entering into direct negotiations with Mr. Lewis under the auspices of Gov. Murphy. This is important because it shows, I think, that the purpose of the company was not to have the strikers ejected by the National Guard but to use the court order as a final threat to compel Mr. Lewis to agree to a basis for the negotiations which the company was now ready to undertake. That this was the real situation is shown, it seems to me, by the fact that the court order was obtained while the Governor's conference was in progress.

THE DISCLOSURES by Mr. Murphy to the Senate committee now show, and for the first time, what was his real policy in respect to the court order. He used it in private dealings with Mr. Lewis to compel Mr. Lewis to yield enough to make possible a settlement. That is now known. It is known that the Governor held up the enforcement of the order for a few days, less than a week, while he convinced Mr. Lewis that he would enforce it if Mr. Lewis did not give way.

He prepared his own orders to employ force and used them to back up an ultimatum with a time limit. The pressure exerted on Mr. Lewis was such that he went to bed sick, and in his hotel bedroom agreed to a settlement.

That the settlement came after a real concession by Mr. Lewis is shown in the fact that the company promptly issued a statement thanking Gov. Murphy "for his unremitting efforts" which had brought about the agreement.

WHAT FOLLOWED after all this is, it seems to me, the really questionable part of Gov. Murphy's conduct. He can hardly be criticized, it seems to me, for not using force when within the short space of a few days he accomplished the object of the court order by the mere threat to use force. But then having in fact obtained a settlement by an ultimatum to Mr. Lewis which was backed by the threat of force Mr. Murphy chose not to disclose what he had done. He chose to let it appear as if Mr. Lewis had agreed voluntarily and as if the Governor had ignored the court order, when in fact he had used the court order as his ace of trumps.

It was not until last week that Mr. Murphy made this disclosure. The question is why he preferred for so long a time to have his actions misunderstood by the general public.

THERE SEEM to have been two controlling reasons. The first was that he thought it would make for bad feeling if the story were made public that Mr. Lewis and the union had yielded to an ultimatum. The feeling was bitter in Michigan and the Governor, who is a genuine believer in conciliation, seems to have thought it the part of wisdom to save Mr. Lewis' face. He seems also to have believed that his role as a mediator in labor disputes would be impaired if he destroyed his popularity with labor by publicly humiliating the union leaders.

This reasoning seems, however, to have been reinforced and mixed with the political notion that as a New Dealer it was politically expedient to appear as the firm and unyielding partisan of labor. So Mr. Murphy never told how he actually settled the strike, and not until ten months later did he venture to make a mild public condemnation of the principle of the sit-down strike.

THE DECISION to save Mr. Lewis' face may well have been a statesmanlike decision to make. But the decision not to condemn the sit-down strike publicly and in unmistakable terms was, I believe, a cardinal error on his part and on the part of the President. It left in doubt something that no Government ought ever for a moment to leave in doubt: where it stands on the issue of upholding the law. The refusal to take a clear stand on that issue not only encouraged more sit-down strikes but, by shaking the public confidence, provoked counter-violence in the form of vigilantes and set in motion a dangerous tide of reactionary sentiment.

This was unstatesmanlike, and though it was done for political reasons it was politically unprofitable as well. For the resentment against the toleration of the sit-down strike was certainly one of the two or three causes of the political revulsion in November, and the main cause for Gov. Murphy's defeat.

SO I AM LEFT with the conclusion that Mr. Murphy acted wisely and well in the General Motors strike, but that in concealing what he had done and letting it be misrepresented, he acted unwisely and unwell.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 16.

PUT A few palm trees on Forty-fourt h street, and set a balmy breeze blowing, and we'd have a fair imitation of Hollywood these nights. For Franchot tone and Sylvia Sidney, both refugees from the studios, are appearing in a new play called "The Gentle People" at the Belasco Theater, and the balcony trade is something tremendous.

The little autograph fiends, male and female, clutter the sidewalks before the theater and lurk about the stage door after the performance until dispersed by the constables. It is astounding how the adolescents of this village flock to see their film shadow in the flesh, and since the play is none too sturdy, its chief hope of moderate success lies in the mob of youthful film fans who pack the cheaper seats at every performance.

Brother Tone never did love Hollywood nearly as much as he loved Joan Crawford, and he has joyfully returned to the speaking stage to play a villain rather than a winsome hero in the new piece. Of course, he will probably go back to the studio chain gangs next summer, but he will pick his parts carefully, and gallop back to Broadway in the fall if he pleases. Money is really no great object to Franchot at the moment. He just wants to act where he chooses.

The little Sidney girl is in much the same position. Hollywood has been kind to her financially, but she still loves best the swish of the rising curtain and the surf-beat of applause that greets her entrance. Scratch the best of the movie actors, and you'll almost invariably find a true lover of the theater. Helen Hayes is a perfect example. In the meantime, Forty-fourth street is giving a very neat imitation of Hollywood these evenings.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: I saw a rare sight a few afternoons ago, in the person of the most inconspicuous "richest woman in the world." Doris Duke and Barbara Hutton get all the headlines, but Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, daughter of the late Hetty Green, has just about as much money and is a far more historic figure in American wealth. She lives very quietly in an apartment on upper Fifth avenue, and can stroll that highway unrecognized by wandering reporters and cameramen. It just happened that I remembered her from her pictures, and I got more kick out of seeing this obscure daughter of fabulous fortune than I do in eying the Stork Club packed to the doors with the costliest debs of the year. For Hetty Green's daughter is a living link with the storybook figure of her miserly mother.

Note to pet-lovers—if you bring your beloved pooch to New York, you can get him a blue plate luncheon for 15 cents at the classy apartment hotel known as Number One Fifth Avenue. Of course, if you are fancy about Fido's diet, an a la carte meal may set you back a little more.

The Gentler Sex

Her Own Car

After she has taken her husband to his office in the cold gray dawn, dropped a daughter off at college, a son at high school, and another daughter at grade school; gone by a hardware store to get some thumotacks, nails, glue, etcetera, for a basement recreation room project; stopped at a shoe repair shop; left some undeveloped films at a camera shop, and left the ailing electric iron at an electrical shop:

After she has picked up a neighbor whose husband "takes the car," gone to market and carted back a truckload of produce for the two of them; after she has unloaded the neighbor—and the produce—and picked up a member of the church auxiliary and driven to the other side of town to get some goods for the church rummage sale; after she has hauled a folding screen, a mammoth picture of George Washington, a chipped bust of Andrew Jackson, a defunct cabinet phonograph and a pile of old clothes to the sale headquarters, unloaded them and heard all the women remark how "nice it is to have your own car to do things with:"

After she has stopped at school to drive her small daughter home for lunch; after she has lunched hurriedly, driven her daughter back to school and agreed to take the daughter and six of her schoolmates the following Saturday to the museum to see the new dinosaur; after she has taken the family's overdue books to the branch library and got a new supply; after she has gone by the home of her sister-in-law (who hasn't a car of her own) and taken visiting Aunt Martha to a beauty shop for a wave; after she has met her young daughter at school and taken her to get her music lesson; after she has picked up her daughter at college and three of her daughter's friends and deposited the friends at their destinations; after she has picked up her son at high school, picked up the daughter who took the music lesson; picked up Aunt Martha and taken her back where she belongs:

After she has hurriedly gotten dinner organized and driven downtown to pick up her husband; after she has stopped on the way home to pick up skates left to be fixed; to pick up the iron that was to be mended and the shoes that were to be repaired; after she has gotten into the house to find the president of the Women's Federation of Jolly Neighborhood Groups on the telephone asking her to haul a group of older members to the mass meeting tomorrow afternoon; and after her sister-in-law has called up to say Aunt Martha wants to be driven to the zoo the day after tomorrow and Big Sister has reminded her that that is the day she must be taken downtown to Clarice's matinee party;

And then after dinner when she flops exhausted into a chair and her husband exclaims, "Well, I don't see what you do all day but ride around in a car!"—well, it is then that she screams—long, loud and lustily.

Nose Infection May Prevent Other Diseases, Test Shows

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

GREAT horror is shown by statisticians and sociologists at the havoc wrought by the common cold. About a million people will be incapacitated this week from colds, making a loss of 3,000 years of working time.

That looks impressive but I doubt if there is as much trouble as it looks on paper. That work all gets done some way or other. And I have always felt that a cold was kind of a nice thing. It puts you to bed for a day or two and let you rest your poor, old, tired nervous system.

This idea that a cold is a good thing gets some support from the observations of Dr. Charles Armstrong, of the United States Public Health Service, published in the Public Health Reports on November 25. Colds, according to Dr. Armstrong, are good things in more ways than one.

Dr. Armstrong began to think about the well-known fact that sleeping sickness and infantile paralysis are summer ills; and the common cold is a winter ill. Sleeping sickness and infantile paralysis both enter the body through the nose. Is it possible that a good nose infection with the common cold crowds out the more terrible diseases?

Working on this suggestion, Dr. Armstrong made some experiments. He washed the noses of white mice with salt water and pooled the washings. Then he grew a culture of bacteria from the washings and put minute amounts of these cultures into the noses of other mice several times a week. After a few days he inoculated their noses with the virus of sleeping sickness. Sixty per cent of them survived this inoculation, while in a control group of mice which had not been previously sprayed with the bacterial culture, only 25 per cent survived.

Apparently the previous nasal infection raised a resistance in the membrane to other infections. It was found that the bacterial spray caused the production of white blood cells, which have a defensive role against infections.

It is possible that some form of immunization can be produced in this way and that the experiments have a practical side. Certainly it would be worth trying in a community faced with an epidemic of infantile paralysis. A "summer cold," even if deliberately induced, is a welcome substitute for either of the other common summer infections.

Your Figure

Alice Marble Rose Up From Fat Anemia

Beautiful Tennis Star Tells How She Won Battle Through Diet

By Ida Jean Kain.

ALICE MARBLE, whose blonde good looks have won her the extracurricular title of "the Carole Lombard of the tennis courts," used to be anemic and overweight! Today she is so radiantly healthy and her figure is so trim that it's hard to believe it is . . . her story, but she insists it is . . . and it may be just the inspiration you need.

During the two years in which she was fighting anemia, Miss Marble put on 30 pounds of extra weight, and her first step toward getting into condition to play tennis again was the reduction of this weight. "It was exactly like carrying around a sack of flour," she recalls now.

The diet that enabled her to lose all the excess consisted of rare beefsteaks twice a day, parsley and other greens and tomatoes, and then, in addition to diet, plenty of sleep and sun and a regular routine. "That's all training amounts to," Miss Marble observes. "It's only a routine of doing the things that make you feel your best."

Activity Helpful

Rest is usually important in the treatment of anemia, but the tennis star found that "activity helped me, too. Walking was excellent, and I also had massage—this was very beneficial from the standpoint of both my well being and my figure. As a matter of fact, it took three inches off my hips!" While singing in New York recently, she also relied on massage as a relief from nerve tension.

During her stay in New York she began to appreciate how difficult it is for the average person living in a big city to get enough exercise and relaxation, but she believes that her plan for training might be made to work anywhere. "My training usually begins in February," she told me, "and I get up earlier for a morning walk. The first morning I walk about 10 blocks before breakfast, then one mile, and then two miles. At first it makes you feel a little empty, but as soon as you get used to it, you feel marvelous. Needless to say, it does marvelous things for the figure, too!"

As you might expect, competitive games would be her favorite means of keeping a lovely figure, for "a little competition does away with any boredom," but walking is next, and she thinks there is a place for calisthenics for the woman who does not play games and who doesn't have time for walking.

Suggests Menu

BREAKFAST of stewed fruit, one egg or crisp bacon, whole wheat toast, black coffee.

LUNCHEON of some kind of meat, such as cold roast beef, a small steak, hamburger or lamb, sliced tomatoes, one or two pieces of rye crisp, hot tea.

DINNER of fruit cup, steak, chops or broiled chicken, two vegetables, and either stewed fruit or ice cream for dessert.

Since she does not drink milk, she takes two tablespoons of whey in a glass of water daily to secure her share of calcium.

You couldn't help liking this tennis star. She is so unaffected and so aware of the problems of the average woman in getting exercise and planning the right kind of diet that she is a very understanding person. Moreover, she has already worked out these problems—against odds—and that makes it easy to take her as an example.

Persons in Love Seldom Consider Practical Aspects Of Marriage, Says Woman Seeking Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When people are in love, they do not always consider practical aspects of marriage that might affect their relationship later on. For this reason, I want to give careful consideration to our situation. We are both mature persons, about 29 years old. I have four more years' education than he. Although we both have professional jobs, I would have to give mine up, temporarily, if we married. I would be willing to live on his salary, but if he does not get about two more years' education, his job security will be greatly jeopardized in the future.

I might secure work later on, but I do want a child right away. Then, too, if he continues his present job (and he would have difficulty getting another as good), we would see too little of each other, because he works at night. If he enrolled in school, the same thing would happen. If he loses his professional post and takes a less desirable job, I would become dissatisfied, because my interests are definitely intellectual and I'd be unhappy associating with a different group of people.

It is important to me, and to him, that he finish his education. For is there not the danger of his feeling less adequate than me, because of this difference in achievement? I might add that his inability to continue school was due, for the most part, to reasons outside his control. Does it all sound impossible? Sometimes I feel that marriage to him, and children, are what I most want, and that the other things will take care of themselves. And yet, I have seen marriages fail because of some of the very problems that face us. Please give me your opinion of the situation.

BERNICE.

Involuntary Pioneers

DEAR BERNICE: Analysts of the twentieth century social scene seem agreed in the opinion that modern young people are seldom privileged to contract marriage under circumstances which could be considered ideal from the practical point of view. As more or less involuntary pioneers in society's upward climb, along a world-wide front, toward a new plateau of human existence, significant for its spiritual awareness of the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God—they are forced to depend more on their own inner resources of strength, sagacity and spontaneous adaptability, in meeting the day-to-day challenges of their chosen course (or, if you will, the problems of the future), than on a supposedly fool-proof set-up planned in advance.

The hardier and, in the long run, the victorious aspirants will do what admirable citizens of each successive generation have always done—namely, select the best of the goods the gods provide, make the most of that material as it comes to hand, and trust to fate and to their own individual social effectiveness to see that an acceptable harvest is returned. They will realize that the sorest mistake of all would be to dissipate their energies, during their period of greatest social vigor, in egocentric, speculative theorizing of the "What do I stand to gain? and what do I stand to lose?" sort. The only answer to that type of speculating is, of course—nothing ventured, nothing gained.

Which brings us to a consideration of your specific queries. In my opinion, they are animated not so much by a spirit of detached truth-seeking as by a spirit of altogether selfish precaution. You care for this man—some; enough to take a chance on him if it can be established that the union will pay you dividends all along the line; but not enough to take him "for better or for worse." You care much more about your own happiness than you ever could for his (or, it may be, for any man's).

All of your questions are concerned, strictly, with the proposition of what you personally may expect—of weal or woe. I think it is a misnomer, therefore, to designate your feeling for him as being "love." Love, my dictionary tells me, is "a feeling of strong personal attachment induced by sympathetic understanding . . ." And yet there is nothing in your pragmatic review of this man's assets and liabilities which indicates that you feel any powerful, protective identification with his side of the problem; nothing to show that there exists, on your part, a sympathetic understanding of his essential capabilities (or incapabilities) such as would enable you to fit helpfully into his life.

I think, frankly, that if you will be altogether honest in this situation, you will admit that what you have here is, simply, a man whom you believe would make you a presentable and congenial husband if—and it is a big "if"—most of the circumstances of his immediate present and conjectural future were different; but that he is not at all the man you might select if given a wider choice in the matter. That being the case, I am not at all sure that you would be conferring any boon upon him in marrying him. In fact, I am inclined to believe you might be doing him a great disservice.

To sum up, I think the greatest obstacle to successful marriage in this instance is your determinedly self-seeking attitude. I think that another sort of woman—of more ardent, idealistic and selfless temperament—might embrace the identical circumstances in toto and manage, in time, to make a very good thing of the marriage. But it would be largely because she loved the man enough to put his happiness and well being before her own. She would be willing, for instance, to forswear a cherished dream of "having a child right away," for one thing; and for another she wouldn't mind too much the prospect of relying upon her own resources during the evenings of the first years of marriage, when her husband would be rounding out his advanced education. She would accept these minor disciplines unflinchingly, because she would be thinking of the partnership in terms of the long haul; and not with the expectation of striking pay dirt immediately.

French and Greek Envoys Share Spotlight at Townsend Luncheon

Mme. Dusia, of Chicago Opera; Emile Baume and Gaspar Cassado Also Honored at Party After 108th Morning Musicale Here

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

TWO POPULAR bachelors from the Diplomatic Corps, the Rrench Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, and the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, were centers of attention yesterday at the luncheon given by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend following her 108th morning musicale at the Mayflower Hotel.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Seated to the right and left of their hostess, both envoys shared the spotlight with Mme. Elen Dosia, Greek-born soprano known far and wide as the "glamour-girl" of the Chicago opera, and Emile Baume, French pianist, who were presented to a Washington audience—a topflight one at that—for the first time yesterday morning.

Also basking in part of the limelight was Gaspar Cassado, Italian cellist, whose highly successful performance was enjoyed especially by the Charge d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy and Signora Cosmelli, who were also among Mrs. Townsend's luncheon guests.

Mme. Dosia, who won her first laurels in the Opera Comique, Paris, is one of the prettiest and peppiest young girls to hit Washington in ever so long. Her floor-length black frock with its crimson vestee and the sunburst sequins on either side was most becoming to her dark beauty; and with everybody flocking around her both before and after the luncheon, it was a problem for even the Greek Minister himself to get close enough to chat with her. Later in the afternoon, he had his inning, however, when he gathered in a few friends for cocktails in her honor at the Greek Legation.

The small, informal party was the first at which the Greek Minister has entertained since his return from a prolonged stay in his homeland. Among the guests was Nicholas Lely, Greek Cosul General to New York, who formerly was Counselor General here, and says he still feels more at home in Washington than in New York.

Mrs. Lawson-Johnston Among Luncheon Guests

Mr. Lely was also in Mrs. Townsend's luncheon company yesterday, and seemed to be enjoying his place to the right of Mme. Dosia. The long oval table was centered with a snow scene and decorated further with low bowls of carnations, iris and red gladioli. Among guests from the diplomatic group, in addition to those already mentioned, were Col. R. V. Read, military attache of the British Embassy; Charles Luces, of the French Embassy, and Mme. Lucet; Nobile Benedetoo Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy; Jacques de Thier, of the Belgian Embassy, and Rastko Petrovich, of the Yugoslav Legation.

Others in the company were Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Edwin T. Memedith, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. Edwin W. Watson, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mrs. Ormond Lawson-Johnston, Mrs. George Grant Mason, Mrs. Frederick H. Bugher, Mme. van Kaathoven, Mrs. Catherine Tenney, Miss Peggy Townsend, William K. Ryan, Clarence Hewes, Ralph Snowden Hill, William Buckland, Glenn D. Dunn, and Frederick Schauwecker and Hans Horwitz, who were accompanists for Mme. Dosia and M. Baume.

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes occupied the Presidential box at the concert in the absence of Mrs. Roosevelt. Among the notables glimpsed at the musicale were Mrs. Mahlen Pitney, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Baron Schell, of the Hungarian Legation; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. Charles Walcott, Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister, accompanied by Mrs. Woodson Houghton; Frau Blankenhorn with Frau von Boetticher, and scores of others, most of whom either entertained or were entertained at luncheon afterward.

Mrs. Hughes in Presidential Box

Mrs. Sumner Welles had a small luncheon party following the concert, taking her guests out to her Oxon Hill home. In the company were Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne and Gen John Phillip Hill.

Mrs. William Howard Taft was the luncheon guest of Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who was hostess at the Mayflower. Others in the party were Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman, and Mrs. James Watson.

Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa, was ranking guest at a luncheon at the Mayflower given by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman in compliment to Mrs. Tunstall Smith, of Baltimore. Covers were laid for twelve.

At another table were Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Frank Crowther, and Mrs. W. L. Breese; while over across the room, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin and Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard were hostesses at a joint luncheon in compliment to Mrs. James Rowland Lowe, of Grand Rapids, the former Miss Betty Ives, of Washington, who is visiting her parents. The party was made up largely of mothers and daughters, friends of the hostesses and Mrs. Lowe.

Mrs. Cecil Announces Tuesday 'At Homes'

Mrs. Joseph Cecil will be "at home" this afternoon and subsequent Tuesdays in January and February in her apartment at 2029 Connecticut avenue. She has not issued invitations.

Charles Dawes To Give Golden Wedding Musicale

Former Vice President and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes have issued invitations for a musicale on Tuesday, January 24, in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary.

The musicale, which will be attended by prominent persons from all over the country, will be held in the Dawes' home in Evanston, Ill.

A recent guest of Gen. and Mrs. Dawes was Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, of Washington, who returned to her home here Sunday night. Going from here to Boston, Mrs. Keyes attended the christening of her grandson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Keyes, and then went to the Midwest on a lecture tour.

Countess de Castellane Returns Here for Visit

Countess Bodan de Castellane, who visited her sister, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, early this season, arrived last evening for another visit and will be with Mrs. Tuckerman for a week or ten days.

Hulls Set Dates Of Dinners for Diplomatic Corps

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull have selected the evenings of February 9 and 10 for the annual dinners at which they entertain in honor of members of the diplomatic corps. The functions will be held at the Carlton, where the Hulls make their home.

Another state dinner on the books is that at whcih the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be hosts Thursday for the Chief Justice and the members of the Supreme Court. Additional guests have been invited for a musicale later.

C. M. Remey Host At Dinner for 18

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were ranking guests at a dinner for 18 given last evening by Charles Mason Remey at his home on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. John T. Remey, of New York, Mr. Remey's sister-in-law, served as his hostess.

Mrs. Miller Fetes Daughter, Aide to Helen Hayes

Mrs. Hugh Miller will entertain at tea from 5 to 7 o'clock today at 1526 New Hampshire avenue for her daughter, Izetta Jewel, jr., manager of Helen Hayes, who is starring in "Victoria Regina" at the National Theater.

Mrs. Miller, known in Washington as Izetta Jewel, leading lady of the Old Columbia Theater stock company, now is serving as a regional director under Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, who recently succeeded Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward as Assistant Administrator of the Works Progress Administration.

Engagement Announced

Dr. and Mrs. Edward Warren Burch, of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Frances, to Joseph King, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas King, of Washington and Lawrenceville, Pa. The wedding will take place in February.

Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, wife of Vice Admiral Andrews, and their daughter, Miss Frances Andrews, have as their guest at the Shoreham Miss Jane Watson of New York City. Miss Watson, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson, will remain in Washington about a week.

In command of the scouting force of the Navy, Vice Admiral Andrews is now on the Pacific Coast. Mrs. Andrews and her daughter returned from California two months ago.

Miss Constance Collier To Be Bride Feb. 4

Mrs. Norborne Page Cocke, of Charlottesville, Va., has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Constance Ann Collier, to William Saunders Buttfield, of Long Island and Charlottesville, son of Mrs. John Edward Lancaster and the late Marsom Innis Buttfield. Miss Collier is the daughter of the late Dr. Dana Monroe Collier.

The wedding will take place at 8:30 p. m. February 4, at Christ Church, Charlottesville.

Miss Eleanore Miller To Marry Jersey Man

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Miller, of Lyon Park, Va., announce engagement of their daughter, Eleanore, to Louis Kriegsfeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kriegsfeld, of Newark, N. J.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Whitney Betrothed to William Rowe

Granddaughter of Mrs. Robert L. Bacon Engaged to Ohioan

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. George Whitney, of New York and Westbury, Long Island, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Martha Phyllis Whitney, to William S. Rowe 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Rowe, of Cincinnati.

Miss Whitney is a granddaughter of Mrs. Robert Bacon, of Westbury, and of the late Mr. Bacon, former United States Ambassador to France. She is a niece of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon of Washington and the late Representative Bacon.

Miss Bacon attended the Chapin School in New York and is a graduate of St. Timothy's School at Catonsville, Md., and of the Villa Collina Ridente in Florence, Italy. She has also studied at Barnard College. Her debut took place in New York in 1936 and she is a member of the Junior League of that city.

Mr. Rowe's father is preisdent of the Fifth Third Union Trust Co. in Cincinnati. The bridegroom-elect is a senior at Harvard University, where he stroked the freshman crew and on the junior varsity in his sophomore and senior years. He is a members of the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770 and of the Porcellian Club.

Col. and Mrs. Pratt Entertained at Cocktail Party

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Walter M. Pratt, of Boston, are at the Shoreham for a few days before going to Miami and Nassau. On their way South, they will stop over at Fort Bragg, N. C., to visit Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Bryden for a few days.

Mrs. Howard Meyers gave a cocktail party yesterday at the Dresden for Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Pratt, and Mr. and Mrs. Burgess will be hosts at a dinner for the visitors this evening. The Pratts will leave tomorrow morning for Fort Bragg.

Col. and Mrs. Pratt have just returned from a 27-day cruise to Rio de Janeiro and other ports. They were married December 16 at St. Matthews Church here. Col. Pratt is in the military intelligence reserves. Mrs. Pratt is the former Mrs. Thomas Whitty, of San Francisco, Calif.

Martin Bournes Go to Miami Beach

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bourne and their daughter, Esther, of Washington, have recently arrived at the Embassy Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., and will occupy the east penthouse for the entire season. While in Washington, Miss Bourne attends Holton Arms School.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gruman and their daughters, the Misses Billie and Mary Gruman are also recent arrivals at the Embassy. Miss Billie Gruman was graduated last year from Miss Finch's School in New York. Miss Mary Gruman is a student at Smith College.

Miss Lelia Elizabeth Harbin, of the Wardman Park, is another Washingtonian who is at the Embassy for a winter holiday.

Mrs. Helen Wiley, of Arlington, Va., a guest during the past month at the Embassy, will return to the Capital this week.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MARY COOTES, most athletic of the season's brides, has appropriately chosen Sun Valley as her honeymoon destination after she and Peter Belin are married this afternoon at St. John's Church. After a few weeks of skiing and skating, they had originally planned to return to make their home in one of the houses which Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin own next to their own residence on Twenty-eighth street in Georgetown. But their original schedule was somewhat upset by the news yesterday that the future bridegroom had met with bad luck on the oral exams he took recently for the State Department Foreign Service. Now, if he decides not to try for the exams a third time, they propose to go around the world, not returning to Washington until next autumn.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mary, who is as fond of society as she is of sports, has been widely feted at a number of prewedding parties, most of them given by friends of the bridegroom's family.

Cuthbert Train will head the ushers at today's wedding. Shortly after the festivities, Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, mother of the bride-to-be, will sail for Haiti for a visit with her son, Merritt Cootes, now home on leave from his Foreign Service post there.

STRAIGHT from one of the most faithful members of the stag line, we learn that the boys consider the best dancer among the debutantes to be Austine McDonnell. Just behind her in talent on the ballroom floor, according to them, come Peggy Townsend, Maisie Howard and Eleanor Meem.

The old saying that nobody ever notices what a man is wearing is borne out by the story we herad about one of the holiday's dances. It seems that the shoes of one of the masculine contingent hurt so much that he took them off and danced the entire evening in his stocking feet—and nobody remarked the difference.

WHEN popular diplomats leave Washington amid tearful farewells, they always promise to come back again for a visit. So few of them really do that it's definitely news to hear that Ian Wilson-Young, formerly attached to the British Embassy, will arrive on Friday for a stay. On leave form the foreign office in London, he will be the guest of Benjamin Plunkett, of the embassy staff.

Speaking of former diplomats, Ramon Padilla, once with the Spanish Embassy, now working for the insurgent cause, sent a girl in Washington a Christmas card with Franco's picture, saying that he was sending it instead of a photograph of himself, as Franco was so much better looking.

THE COMING WEEK-END promises to be one of the gayest of the season, with many coming from out of town for the last of the Three Dances. Baron and Baroness Richard d'Epremesnil, of Upperville, Va., will take an apartment at the Anchorage for the Sulgrave Club party and the dinner dance to be given on Sunday by the Polish Ambassador, Countess Bernstoff, whose father-in-law was German Ambassador here during the World War, also will be down from New York. Her husband works in Rio de Janeiro, but she is spending some time in the United States. Another visitor over the week-end will be Mrs. Kate Redmond, of New York, who will stay with Count and Countess Roberti.

OF PURELY FRIVOLOUS NOTE: The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg will entertain at a luncheon on Sunday, as will Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock . . . Mrs. Marion Warburg will be hostess at a 5 to 7 party on Saturday afternoon . . . Mrs. Hiram Bingham will give a tea on Friday for Mrs. Robert Chambers . . . Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot have opened their house here and are planning several dinner parties . . . Mrs. Forbes Morgan, of New York, was among the crowd in the Pall Mall room listening to Mary de Sibour's singing the other evening. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and Mr. and Mrs. John Hinckley.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Worcester, Jr. To Live Here After Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Worcester, jr., now on a wedding trip which includes a cruise to the Panama Canal Zone and a stay of several weeks at Mr. Worcester's farm in New Hampshire, will return March 1. They will make their home at Falkland, Silver Spring, Md.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Worcester was Miss Dorothy Scott, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Scott, of Silver Spring. Mr. Worcester is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Worcester, of Winchester, Mass.

The ceremony was performed Thursday evening, January 12, at the home of the bride's parents, with the Rev. J. Wesley Loftis, of the Silver Spring Baptist Church, officiating. The bride wore a gown of turquoise blue net and satin, made with a long, full skirt, a square neckline and short, puffed sleeves. Her doll hat was fashioned of blue satin flowers and she carried a bouquet of orchids, sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Scott, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore a gown of peach net and satin made in princess style. She carried a bouquet of peach-colored roses. The best man was John Worcester, of Winchester, brother of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Stapleton Entertains With First 'At Home'

Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton entertained at the first of her series of "at homes" this season yesterday afternoon in her home on Massachusetts avenue.

Among those assisting were Mrs. John Biddle, Mrs. Ferry Heath, Mrs. Albert Fletcher, Mrs. John Henry Dwight, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, Mrs. John Hamilton, Mrs. George Hamilton, jr., and Mrs. Mae Hamilton, the hostess' sister. Also generally assisting was Mrs. Stapleton's daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Mrs. Stapleton will receive again next Monday afternoon.

Second Child Born To Mrs. Myers

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Kendall Myers announce birth of a son, their second child, at Columbia Hospital yesterday morning.

Mrs. Myers formerly was Miss Carold Grosvenor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. Dr. Myers is a practicing physician here.

The child has been named Gardner Hubbard.

In Hollywood

Gustave Ring, of Washington, has joined Mrs. Ring and Miss Carlyn Ring at the Hollywood Beach Hotel, Hollywood, Calif., for several weeks.

Midwinter Sessions Open Tomorrow At Headquarters

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A dinner, given by the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs in honor of officers of the General Federation, will precede the annual reception of the board of the national organization tonight in the ballrom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The midwinter sessions of the board, preceded yesterday by meetings of the trustees and department chairmen at federation headquarters, 1734 N street northwest, open tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Federation officers who will be guests of honor at the Maryland dinner tonight are headed by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, the president, and include Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president; Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, of Keene, N. H., second vice president; Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, Ga., recording secretary, and Mrs. J. L. B. Buck, of Richmond, Va., treasurer.

Senators' Wives Will Attend

Other honored guests will be Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. George L. Radcliffe, wives of the Senators from Maryland; Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, wife of the newly elected Governor, and Mrs. John S. Sippel, of Baltimore, a past president of the General Federation.

Others among the nearly 50 dinner guests will be Mrs. Harry Hareum, president of the State federation, who will preside, and other State officers, including Mrs. Walter Kriel, first vice president; Mrs. Alfred Truitt, secretary, and Mrs. Ira Pool, treasurer; two past presidents, Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, of College Park; past State directors in the general federation, Mrs. J. Enos Ray, of Hyattsville, and Mrs. J. W. Averitt Thomas, of Cumberland; Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Thomas J. Tingley, of the Roland Park Woman's Club. Arrangements for the affair are in charge of Mrs. William Orm, of the Chevy Chase Club.

This morning the Presidents' Council, headed by Mrs. Merrill F. Proctor, will meet at 10 o'clock, and this afternoon the Directors' Council, of which Mrs. W. E. Chapman is president, will meet at 2. The reception tonight will be at 9 o'clock.

Tomorrow afternoon, following a business session at federation headquarters, board members will be received by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House and she will address the evening session at 8:15 in the east room of the Mayflower.

To Be Received At White House

This is the first year that the programs of the midwinter meeting of the board have been held outside of the headquarters and have been open to the general public. Many clubwomen from Maryland, Virginia and other adjacent States have come to the Capital to attend the opening meetings, giving the week the character of a general convention and extending its advantages to a much greater number of clubwomen than before.

The social affairs will include a luncheon of the Southeastern Council, Thursday noon at the Iron Gate Inn. Mrs. Tom B. Davis, of Charleston, W. Va., is president of this group.

Mrs. Emma Fox, 91, Here for Women's Clubs Meeting

Mrs. Emma Fox, whose book, "Parliamentary Usage," governs the sessions of 19 national women's organizations, including the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is here from Detroit to attend the meetings of the national board of the federation, convening tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Fox, parliamentarian for the federation for the National Woman's Party and the World Woman's Party. She is staying at Alva Belmont House, headquarters of these organizations, and also conferring with Miss Alice Paul on the setup of the newly-formed world organization.

Mrs. Fox, an alert, energetic little person, whose hair is gray but not yet white, passed her ninety-first birthday a few months ago, and is still looking forward to new achievements instead of backward at old ones. In November, she served as parliamentarian for the national convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Tulsa, Okla., and will act in that capacity during the federation board meeting this week. She has been parliamentarian for 11 Continental Congresses of the Daughters of the American Revolution, although this organization uses "Robert's Rules of Order" rather than her book as its manual of parliamentary procedure. "Robert's Rules" were written by the father-in-law of Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., who is now president of the D. A. R.

A pioneer in her own profession as teacher and writer on parliamentary law, Mrs. Fox has been interested throughout her career in the opening of all fields to women. She was the first to introduce in the Michigan Federation of omen's Clubs a resolution for the indorsement of equal rights and this was passed by the State body.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

WOMEN SECRETARIES of members of the Kansas Congressional delegation will get acquainted today at a luncheon in the Senate dining room. It will be the first time such a gathering of women staff members for a State delegation has been arranged and it has aroused considerable interest on the Hill.

Mrs. Kathryn Graham and Miss Eleanor Shefley, secretaries to Senator Clyde M. Reed, will be hostesses. They will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth Ise and Miss Bernice Silcott, of his office. Mrs. Reed, the Senator's daughter; Mrs. Vernon E. Bundy and Mrs. Bertha Wetherton, special assistant in the Department of Internal Revenue who served under Senator Reed when he was Governor, will be guests.

Other guests will be Mrs. Ethelyne E. Souders, Miss Julia McKee and Miss Catherine Scott, of Senator Arthur Capper's staff; Miss Muriel Delka, from the office of Representative W. P. Lambertson; Miss Dorothy Eggleston, from that of Representative E. H. Rees; Miss Naomi Shotto, of Representative Thomas D. Winters' staff; Miss Helen Krivacs, of the office of Representative U. S. Guyer; Miss Darlene Barnhill, of Representative Frank Carlson's staff; Miss Marguerite Lenherr, of Representative Clifford R. Hope's and Miss Hazel Casement, of Representative John M. Houston's.

THREE MEMBERS of the District of Columbia chapters of the P. E. O. who have belonged for over 50 years will be present Friday night at the Founders' Day celebration at the Carlton Hotel. They are Mrs. Worthy P. Sterns, Mrs. A. H. Williams and Mrs. E. O. Woodruff. All will wear costumes of half a century ago.

Mrs. Roy A. Potts, president of Chapter A, is chairman of the arrangements committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. F. F. Elliott, president of Chapter F, and Mrs. L. A. Reynolds, of Chapter I.

The program will include a one-act play, "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," to be given by Rose Robinson Cohen's players, and songs by Mrs. Vera Ross, mezzo sporano of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church.

Chapter H, of which Mrs. Rush B. Lincoln is president, will meet tonight with Mrs. Daniel S. Coombs.

AND speaking of meetings today, there will be the annual tea of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Medical Society of the District in the library of the Medical Building 1718 M street, from 4 to 6 p. m.

Mrs. James G. Cumming, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Eugene Whitmore, Mrs. Lester Newman, Mrs. Edward Pickford, Mrs. Virgil B. Jackson, Mrs. Frank X. McGovern, Mrs. Coursin B. Conklin, and Mrs. Ralph Lecompte.

Mrs. William J. Mallory, auxiliary president, will be assisted by the following officers in the receiving line: Mrs. John Lyons, Mrs. James Cahill, Mrs. Horatio Dorman, Mrs. James M. Moser, Mrs. Caryl Burbank, Mrs. Wade Atkinson, Mrs. Ralph S. Pendexter and Mrs. Hugh Davis.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Joseph S. Wall, Mrs. Harry S. Kerr, Mrs. Oscar B. Hunter, Mrs. Arthur C. Christie, Mrs. Prentiss Willson, Mrs. J. Lawn Thompson, Mrs. Harry Fowler, Mrs. Edward Morrison and Mrs. Thomas Neill.

Hadassah to See Film of Jewry's Gains in Palestine

The Washington Chapter of Hadassah will meet at the Jewish Community Center at 2 o'clock this afternoon and will be shown a film, "This Is the Land," the first Palestine Hebrew talking picture. It tells the story of 50 years of Jewish progress in Palestine and reveals the courage of the builders of the Jewish national home. The cast includes the Habimah Players. The music is by Levanon and songs by J. Harussi and A. Pen. The titles are in English.

It presents an authentic record of the transformation of the desert into thriving cities with modern buildings, industry, and culture, and fertile farm land.

Brackenridge Club Will Dine Tonight

The National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club will hold a "family dinner" tonight at 1749 N street at 6:30. Members are inviting their families or friends.

A musical program will be in charge of Mrs. Penn Howard, assisted by Miss Luella Lathrop, pianiste; Mrs. Mildred Moore, soprano; Miss Frances Thatch, mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. Ida Woods, contralto. Miss Helen Morton will speak on "The Life of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw," author of the club's preamble.

Tea Aids Drive For Mothers' Clinic Funds

Mrs. Willson Tells Sponsors of Work Done by Association

The Mothers' Health Association yesterday opened its annual campaign for funds at a tea for the sponsors at the home of Mrs. John W. Davidge, 2825 Rock Creek drive. The campaign will continue until January 30.

The association, organized and incorporated a year ago last July, maintains a birth-control clinic at 715 E street southwest, which now serves from 50 to 60 patients a month. The house was donated to the association for its headquarters. Dr. Agnes McNutt has been clinician since the clinic was started. It began with one session a week and now has four.

All of the patients are from low income groups and there are more white women than colored among them, according to Mrs. Prentiss Willson, association president.

"A typical case which I have been following," said Mrs. Willson, "is that of a mother, married 16 years, who had eight living children and who died just before Christmas at the birth of the ninth. She was suffering from tuberculosis and most of the children have also had it, one now being cared for in Glenn Dale Hospital. The family is known to 23 agencies and the care of the motherless children now devolves entirely upon the community.

"Sponsors of the Mothers' Health Association believe with Margaret Sanger, that 'every mother needs the sun of two summers to car for a little one before another comes.' The birth control clinic is a constructive means of preventing suffering and helping to solve the relief problem. Planned parenthood relieves the mother, overworked or in serious ill health, and is an effective and far-reaching social measure."

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., is chairman of the drive and Mrs. Thomas S. Wilkinson, chairman of sponsors.

Virginia Press Conference Set Jan. 27

Notables to Address 2-Day Parley At Roanoke

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 16.—More than a score of Virginia newspapermen will lead discussions during the twenty-first midwinter convention of the Virginia Press Association, to be held here January 27-28. They will participate in the advertising and editorial news conferences.

Out-of-State speakers include Eugene MacKinnon, of Chicago, chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who will discuss labor problems; H. H. Kynett, of Philadelphia, who will speak on newspaper and advertising agency relationships, and Floyd L. Hockenhull, of Chicago, who will explain ways to increase circulation revenues.

At the opening session announcement will be made of the Virginia editor winning the 1938 Lee editorial award and the daily newspapers receiving certificates of merit in their annual contest.

Maj. Raymond B. Bottom, of Newport News, president of the association, will preside at the general sessions. Tennant Bryan, business manager of the Richmond News Leader and association vice president, will serve as chairman of the advertising conference. Chairman of the editorial-news conference will be Winder R. Harris, managing editor of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Rites to Be Held Tomorrow for Lewis Davidson

Funeral services for Lewis Davidson, 79, a florist here and descendant of an early Washington family, who died Sunday, will be held at his residence, 2839 Fourteenth street northwest, tomorrow at 10 a. m. A requiem mass will be held at St. Anne's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

A native of Maryland, he was a direct descendant of Samuel Davidson, who donated to the Government the site of the State Department, Jackson Park and parts of the White House grounds, and his mother, the former Miss Annie Saunders, of Virginia, was a descendant of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Amy J. Davidson, of Washington; two sons, Lewis G. and Lester L., both of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Patrick A. Sugrue, of Washington, and Mrs. A. A. O'Donnell, of Denver.

$10,000 Banknote Tossed to Band in Jest Proves Real

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. Myra Wallace, wife of a music publisher, learned tonight the $10,000 banknote which she tossed to Shep Fields, orchestra leader, for playing one of her favorite numbers might be legal—not stage money as she had thought.

Federal agents told Fields it was a genuine Federal Reserve note. Four years ago it was thrown out of the Federal Reserve offices in Washington with some rubbish. It was of the type, usually worthless, used in making adjustments between Federal Reserve banks. But this one was indorsed. Agents couldn't say for certain that the signature made it legal, but they kept the bill.

Anti-Embargo Group Denounces Fr. Coughlin

Congress will not be stampeded by 50,000 telegrams from Father Coughlin, officials of the Medical Bureau and North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy asserted yesterday in a statement denouncing the stand taken by the Detroit "radio priest" against lifting the Spanish embargo.

The statement termed Father Coughlin the "discredited" leader of a "discredited minority" and questioned the extent of his influence in the Nation.

Latin Expert Sees New Bond Created At Lima Parley

Dr. Raul d'Eca, of the Pan American Union, declared before the Democratic Women's National Council the Lima Conference created a bond of continental solidarity between the Americas.

The situation today is the same as it was in 1823 when President Monroe promulgated his famous doctrine, Dr. d'Eca said. An ever-increasing attitude of friendliness on the part of this nation has ameliorated hard feeling, he said. A great deal will depend on the future foreign attitude of this country, he added.

The meeting of the council was presided over by its president, Mrs. H. A. Dodderidge. Mrs. Alma Livingston Chevlin was chairman of arrangements. Guests of honor were H. C. Montee, Lima Conference correspondent, and Dr. Raffael Pico, of Catholic University.

2 Russians, Ex-Navy Aide Deny Spy Plot Charges

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (AP).—Mikhail Gorin, Pacific Coast manager of a Russian travel bureau, his attractive wife, Natasha, and Hafis Salich, former agent of the U. S. Naval Intelligence Service, pleaded innocent in Federal Court today to indictments charging conspiracy to violate the peace-time espionage act. Trial was set for February 21.

Flying Senorita, Aide Rescued by Steamer

Miami, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP)—Hermilinda Briones, flying senorita from Ecuador, was forced down at sea today on a 90-mile flight from Havana to Key West, but found a freighter to take her and her mechanic aboard.

Bucking a 25-mile headwind, she was 40 miles off her course with her fuel supply exhausted three hours after leaving Camp Columbia but spotted the steamer Liberty Bell. The little open cockpit plane sank immediately after the two were rescued.

Klan Head Accepts Catholic Invitation

Atlanta, Jan. 16 (AP).—Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, said today he had accepted an invitation from Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara, of the Savannah-Atlanta Roman Catholic Diocese, to attend dedication ceremonies Wednesday for Atlanta's new Co-Cathedral of Christ the King.

Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, will head the group of Catholic dignitaries at the services. Other Catholic dignitaries taking part will be Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, and Mgr. Dennis J. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, Washington.

British Ship Cancels Radio Distress Call

Congress To Get Key Bridge Fight

Georgetown Group Claims Business Has Fallen 75% Since Span Was Closed

Georgetown businessmen last night prepared to carry their fight to Congress for the reopening of Key Bridge during business hours. They appointed a committee of 12 to seek funds for a ramp to handle normal traffic through the 10-month period for building an extra span on the Virginia end, passing over the extended George Washington Memorial highway.

Threatened with drastic business losses from elimination of all private automobile traffic over the bridge during the day time, more than 100 businessmen representing the shopping districts along M street and Wisconsin avenue northwest gathered at the call of the Georgetown Businessmen's Association to find where to turn for relief. They received answers from E. L. Tarwater, of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, which is in charge of the bridge work, and from John Paul Jones, general counsel for the association.

Bridge Opening Studied

Tarwater assured the businessmen the bureau "without making any promises," was studying possibility of opening the bridge to passenger traffic during nonrush hours, and opening the bridge earlier than the present hour of 6 p. m.

Jones said he believed the closing of the bridge was "unlawful" because the District code states the Key Bridge shall be under control of the District Commissioners and shall be used as a highway for traffic, and because the act covering the highway extension does not specifically authorize the building of the new ramp or closing the bridge.

While expressing appreciation to Tarwater for the bureau's efforts to open the bridge, Jones declared "we're going out to get the bridge opened entirely.

"The moral of the story is those in the Federal Government doing Government work overlook things that are vital to us. We are faced with a situation which may force us to close our businesses for good. Once again the District and Georgetown has been ignored by those who did not know. Now let's tell them."

Individual businessmen declared since the bridge closed a week ago business had fallen off in some instances 75 per cent. While commercial traffic, buses, trucks and street cars have continued to cross the bridge, private passenger cars have been detoured.

Transit Company Explains

Any friction with the Capital Transit Co. was cleared away at the meeting. Tarwater, and E. P. Goucher, way engineer for the Transit Co., explained the firm, at its own cost, was building a steel substructure to raise tracks to the level of the new bridge. This work, Goucher said, had permitted abandoning plans for a temporary ramp, carrying buses and street cars past the construction, at a cost of about $9,000.

He said this saving had been credited to the Transit Co., and the contract cost of the track substructure had been brought from $35,000 to about $26,000, part of an $80,000 item in the current Transit budget for the necessary work at the Virginia end of the bridge.

Subscription Plan Scored

Suggestions that the Georgetown businessmen raise by subscription enough money to build the temporary ramp for traffic was scored by Jones. He pointed out Georgetown taxpayers were already helping pay for the span, and yet when the project was put thruogh the residents of the section were not notified the bridge would be closed.

Others who spoke at the meeting included Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the Washington Motor Club; Inspector W. E. Holmes and Capt. J. E. Bowers, of the Metropolitan Police; Fred Windridge, of the Rosslyn Businessmen's Association, and Thomas S. Gulick, president of the Georgetown Association.

Bridge Problem Studied

A committee to study means of expediting completion of work on Key Bridge without hindrance to automobile traffic was named last night by the Interfederation Conference at a meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Julian D. Simpson was named committee chairman after the conference adopted a resolution regarding closing of the bridge to private travel.

The following officers were reelected: H. S. Yohe, of Montgomery County, chairman; Dr. Victor Meyers, of Arlington County, first vice chairman; Judge Alfred E. Bailey, of Prince Georges County, second vice chairman; L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations of the District, third vice chairman, and E. L. Bennett, of Arlington, secretary-treasurer.

Transfusion Aids Viridans Victim

Frederick J. Adelman, 46, father of ten children, gave the blood. Mrs. Edna Diehl, 647 Maine avenue southwest, was the patient.

Adelman was advised not to give blood to the other victim, Mrs. Walter B. Matheny, Lanier place northwest, for fear of weakening himself.

Court to Rule In Gas Light Labor Dispute

Small Claims Judge Arbitrates Union's Bid for Closed Shop

The District small claims court was called on yesterday to settle a labor dispute between the Washington Gas Light Co. and its 1,100 employes. The case was the first of this sort to come before the court, a branch of the municipal court, since its establishment last April.

Before parties to the dispute agreed to arbitrate several weeks ago, the employes' representative, the District of Columbia Gas Workers Union, had threatened to strike, The Post learned last night.

At issue was the demand of the union for a closed-shop provision in a new agreement entered into with the management. An earlier agreement expired last month. Union representatives said the decision to arbitrate precluded the possibility of a strike regardless of the court's finding.

The case was presented to Judge Nathan Cayton by James F. Reilly, attorney for the union, and F. G. Awalt and E. Barrett Prettyman, former District corporation counsel, attorneys for the company. Judge Cayton promised a decision within 10 days.

The dispute was taken before Cayton under a provision of the act establishing the court giving it authority to handle arbitration cases regardless of their nature.

Four Democratic Vacancies Left In D.C. Committee

Four vacancies were left in the Democratic membership of the House District Committee released yesterday following a majority caucus.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, was formally assigned to the chairmanship of the committee and three new members were added. They are Representatives William D. Byron, of Maryland; Pius L. Schwert, of New York, and Joseph A. McArdle, of Pennsylvania.

Representative Kramer (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who had been informally assigned to the committee, refused to accept the appointment, it was learned.

Arkansas to Fete New Representatives

New members of Congress from Arkansas and their wives will be guests of the State Society at a dinner and reception Thursday evening at the Hotel Roosevelt. Among the guests will be Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace, and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins.

Child Welfare Here Called 'Antiquated'

Denouncing the District child welfare system as "woefully antiquated and inadequate," Dr. Jacob Kepecs, Chicago pediatrician, urged a widespread "rejuvenation" of the Washington program last night at a meeting of the Monday Evening Club at the Y. W. C. A.

Appointed by the United States Children's Bureau, Dr. Kepecs is in Washington consulting with the Board of Public Welfare in revision of the local welfare system.

Describing the Capital's welfare program as adequate only for "horse and buggy days," Dr. Kepecs charged specifically that it is deficient in budget, administration, and personnel.

Funds Should Be Doubled

A tour of child institutions in Washington revealed that "not a single one is adequate according to modern standards," he said, all being deficient either in physical facilities, plant or some other essential.

The present working fund of $200,000 should be at least doubled to support an adequate system, he declared.

The present administration, with authority divided among several different heads, lacks co-ordination, he said, and personnel is generally deficient in training and efficiency.

A co-ordinated system bolstered by budgetary increases is necessary to raise the Washington program to modern requirements and make it no longer "30 years behind the times," it was said.

Court System Criticized

The "rejuvinated" system would take the form of a three-division system under a single head. "Institutional" cases would be cared for in two large "schools," for boys and girls, divided into age units. Separate departments would have charge of the problems of "protective services" for children in homes and their placement with foster parents.

The local welfare system was further criticized as needlessly overlapping in the courts where children are originaliy committed to institutions or foster homes.

Psychiatric services to deal with more difficult cases and psychological advice in guiding children along vocational lines are also prime needs of the District program, Kepecs concluded.

Police Rush to Bank; Mop Sets Off Alarm

Too thorough a job of cleaning at the City Bank at Ninth and Mount Vernon place northwest last night brought out police scout cars to investigate a burgler alarm.

Police learned William B. Smith, 20, 76 DeFrees street northwest, employed as porter at the bank for three weeks, had set off the alarm while mopping the floor. He explained he was not yet familiar with the alarm system.

16th Street Citizens Back Overton Plan

But Second Group Waits For Further Study Before Indorsing It

The Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association added its approval last night to the growing demand of Washington residents for Congressional acceptance of the plan of Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, to tax the Federal Government for its share of the cost of District operation.

Another citizens' organization, meanwhile, decided to give the proposal further consideration before taking action. The Overton plan would tax the Government for real estate it occupies in the District in lieu of accepting an annual lump sum contribution from Congress.

The membership committee of the Sixteenth street organization reported that a recent drive had resulted in 200 new members in two months.

Lincoln Park

Plans for development of southeast Washington would be "ruined" if the District Morgue is moved to a site near Gallinger Hospital, the Lincoln Park Citizens Association declared last night.

The association unanimously adopted a resolution asking that the morgue remain at its present site on Main avenue southwest.

The association also unanimously voted to urge District health authorities to provide funds to care for sufferers from diabetes and asthma. Members of the association pointed out that these diseases are allowed to run unchecked, while other more publicized diseases receive attention in Federally financed health projects.

Mrs. E. B. Morse, chairman of the public welfare committee of the association, advocated construction of a permanent postoffice substation and a branch bank in the vicinity of Fifteenth and C streets northeast.

New members elected include Miss Alice Siddall, John A. Park, Miss Gertrude Bishoff, Harry W. Frost, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, Ella V. Fogleman and Amos T. Fogleman.

Central Labor Union

Opposition to a sales tax for the District and support of a graduated income tax were voted last night by the Central Labor Union, indorsing the stand previously taken by its president, John Locher, who served as a member of the joint House and Senate advisory committee on the District tax structure.

Locher and all other officers of the body were renominated without opposition, to serve another year, at the meeting in the Typographical Temple. The secretary will cast a unanimous ballot at the next meeting.

Century-Old Asbury Colored M. E. Church Makes Ceremony of Burning Its Mortgage

As more than 1,500 parishioners look on, Miss Mary Mason, 95, oldest living member of the Asbury Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, last night applied a match to the $42,000 mortgage on the building.

Bishops, members of the official board and others joined in the mortgage-burning ceremony, representig the fruition of 25 years' efforts on the part of the century-old congregation at Eleventh and K streets northwest.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of this city, head of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the principal address, declared that "the paying off of this debt is an indication of growing racial pride, and I thank God for it."

Urging the congregation not to be content with their past accomplishments, and not to go back on God, Bishop Hughes asserted that "when you go back on God, you go back on yourselves."

"When your ancestors marched out of the cotton fields and sang, 'Steal Away to Jesus,' God was the only refuge they had, and today God is the only refuge both white and black people have."

Awards were made to George W. Boone and Mrs. Estelle V. Hawkins, leaders in the recent rally which brought contributions of more than $4,000, enabling the final payment on the mortgage. The Rev. Robert M. Williams, now in his eighth year at Asbury, was presented with a gift on behalf of the congregation.

Among the former pastors who spoke were Bishop Matthew W. Clair, of the Covington area, under whose leadership the present structure was built in 1916; Dr. Julius S. Carrol and Dr. J. H. Jenkins, of Lynchburg, Va.

King Assails Isms Before Businessmen

Central Association Installs Mileham As President at Annual Banquet

Bitterly assailing communism, fascism and naziism and the portion of American people, who, "by their negligent attitude toward governmental problems are allowing this country to drift in the direction of state socialism, which eventually leads to communism," Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate House Committee, last night addressed members of the Central Business Association.

The occasion was the eighth annual banquet of the association at the Hamilton Hotel.

D. C. Tax Rates to Rise

King added that tax rates in the District would have to rise, as the Federal Government was now carrying more of a relief load than it could bear. Without mentioning names he intimated that he hoped President Roosevelt would not run for a third term, when he congratulated Association President William J. Mileham as he started his second year and "hoped he would have better sense than to run again."

Other speakers were District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Isaac Gans, member of the A. B. C. Board; Francis G. Addison, president, Board of Trade; W. Wallace Chiswell, president, Peoples Life Insurance Co., and L. A. Carruthers, president, Federation of Citizens' Associations.

President Mileham briefly introduced Dr. Thomas Evans, president of the Washington National Democratic Club, and Arthur Clarendon Smith, Joseph H. Batt and Hugh V. Keiser, all past presidents of the association.

Officers Inducted

Officers inducted for the coming year in addition to Mileham were E. Catesby Rowzee, first vice president; Dr. James I. Wolfe, second vice president; Estelle M. Whiting, third vice president, Louis I. Obergh, secretary-treasurer, and J. Nelson Anderson, general counsel.

Arch McDonald, radio commentator, acted as master of ceremonies and presented a program including the Y. M. C. A. Glee Club, "Tex" Walker, the singing cowboy; Preble Earle Donoho, child pianist; Harry H. Baker, magician; the Two Gees, piano and vocalizing, and the Ruffian Brothers, "entertainment from Dixie."

Shotgun Bandit And Aide Confess 15 Major Holdups

Police said last night they had captured the shotgun bandit and his accomplice and received a full confession clearing up 15 major holdups in Washington and Arlington in recent months.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompason, chief of detectives, and Lieut. John Fowler, head of the robbery squad, said one suspect, arrested in New York City on information furnished by Washington police, had admitted taking part in eight of the hold-ups.

The second suspect, seized by the robbery squad in Washington several hours later, confessed to all 15 robberies. Their arrest came after their most recent holdup attempt was thwarted by William Allen and Emory Johnson, employes of an Arlington drugstore, who gave complete descriptions of the bandits to police.

Traffic Regulation Lectures Started

To "stimulate . . . stricter traffic regulation enforcement," two Traffic Division police sergeants yesterday began a series of lectures to members of the Metropolitan force.

In the lectures Sergts. John O. Hite and Joseph D. Harrington will stress enforcement of regulations regarding turns, hand signals, pulling from the curb and lights.

Merit Status Urged For U. S. Lawyers

Government legal positions should be filled through civil service and all Federal lawyers should be classified with "equal pay for equal work," the executive council of the Federal Bar Association decided last night.

15 Hurt Here As Winter Keeps Its Grip

Icy Streets Account For 11 Injuries; Rain Forecast for Thursday

Eleven persons in the District area suffered injuries yesterday from slipping on snow and ice surfaced streets, sidewalks and steps. Three persons were hurt in coasting accidents and a pedestrian was injured when struck by a piece of ice.

The Weather Bureau meanwhile predicted that the normal weather would remain in Washington today and tomorrow, with rain expected Thursday. The temperature, which struck a high of 38 at 2 p. m. yesterday, will hover around that mark for the next two days.

Charlotte Robertson, 6, of 115 Fairmont avenue, Woodmont, Md., sustained a deep gash in her head when her sled crashed into a parked auto on Overhill road, Greenwich Forest, near Bethesda. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Fall Victims

James J. Hines, 29, of 200 block Maryland avenue northwest, suffered injury to ribs when struck by a piece of ice while walking in 500 block D street northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. S. W. Pitts, 30, of 4421 North Thirty-eighth street, Arlington, lost five teeth and suffered severe injuries to the right leg, nose and eyes, when her sled crashed with that of Mrs. J. H. Roe, 25, of 2922 N street northwest, while they were coasting on Ditmar Hill, Arlington. Mrs. Roe's nose was fractured and her scalp cut. They were taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Mississippi Society To Fete Congressmen

The Mississippi Society of Washington will hold its annual reception and dance in honor of members of the State's Congressional delegation and their wives at Wardman Park Hotel tonight.

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board, president of the society, will head the receiving line. Vernon N. Holleman is chairman of the program.

Jitterbugs in REA Dance

A jitterbug contest will feature a dance to be given on Friday by the Mapping Section of the Rural Electrification Administration at the Continental Hotel. The Washington swing band will play.

Parking Ban Opposed at Takoma Park

Seventh Day Adventists, Business Group Would Modify Restrictions

A public hearing on the stormy question of parking restrictions in the Takoma Park business section was held last night by Mayor John R. Adams and the Town Council, at which Ralph Shure, chairman of a special committee of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, and H. H. Cobban, assistant treasurer of the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, presented detailed resolutions embodying the needs of those two organizations.

The trouble began about a month ago when for the first time the 60-minute parking rule was enforced in the Takoma Park business section and around the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Business men stated that in many cases one hour is insufficient parking time for Takoma Park shoppers, and the Seventh Day Adventists, who hold 4-hour services every Saturday morning from 8:30 to 12:30, said that they should receive special consideration.

Ask Streets Be Open

Asking that on Saturday mornings Carroll avenue from the Citizens' Bank to Willow avenue on the north side, and from Laurel avenue to Eastern and Willow avenues on the south side, be opened for four-hour parking, Cobban declared that the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists had set up parking spaces behind its buildings for its employes' use, and asked them not to leave their cars on the street.

The following plan was embodied in the resolution submitted by the Chamber of Commerce:

Thirty-minute parking four car lengths in front of Citizens' and Suburban National Bank;

Other Provisions

Two-hour parking on the west side of Carroll avenue from Elm avenue to the alley; on the east side of Carroll avenue, from the alley to the intersection; and on Willow avenue to the Citizens' Bank alley.

Three-hour parking on the south side of Carroll avenue from the District of Columbia line to Laurel avenue; and on the east side of Laurel avenue to Eastern avenue.

All restrictions to apply from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Other speakers at the hearing were E. V. Crittendon, who asked that one-hour parking be permitted in front of the bank, and John Coffman, who asked that a municipal parking space be established. Stanley E. McNeil, Mrs. Anna Schadel, H. H. Harrigan, and Frank S. Harris, also gave their views.

Discovery that some 12,000 Farm Security Administration and 560 Puerto Rican Reconstruction Corporation employes are not covered by the Woodrum amendment to the deficiency relief bill that would grant civil service status to 16,000 workers paid by relief funds and employed in old-line agencies, has been called to attention of the Senate Deficiency Appropriation Subcommittee.

Representative Woodrum introduced the amendment in the House when it became apparent that thousands would be denied status through exclusion of the WPA and the NYA.

Assault With Pipe Fractures Skull

His skull fractured by a pipe-wielding assailant, William C. Guthridge, 38, of 4914 Fourth street northwest, a painting contractor, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

Police were looking for a former employ dismissed by Guthridge, who said he was attacked by an intruder who had been hiding in the basement.

Almas Shrine Names Willis Potentate

Walker Re-elected Divan's Recorder For Twentieth Year; On Council for Life

Almas Temple of the Shrine elected Stanley D. Willis its potentate last night. F. Lawrence Walker was re-elected recorder for the twentieth consecutive year and a representative in the Imperial Council for the twenty-first time.

Walker's selection for the council entitles him to life membership in that body, with the title of "representative emeritus," Shrine officials pointed out.

Jarrell Named Chief Rabban

Other Divan officials chosen were:

Karl E. Jarrell, chief rabban; Earl W. Shinn, assistant rabban; Howard P. Foley, high priest and prophet; Needham C. Turnage, Oriental guide, and Frank E. Ghiselli, treasurer. Elected in addition to Walker to represent the temple at the sixty-fifth annual session of the Imperial Council in Baltimore next June were:

Robert P. Smith, past potentate, named for the fifth consecutive term: Willis, and Jarrell. Leonard P. Steuart, it was pointed out, is a life member of the council and a perpetual representative by reason of being a past Imperial Potentate.

At the suggestion of the retiring potentate, Granville Gude, broke a long-established precedent of sending the outgoing potentate to the council session the following year. Instead, the new potentate and the chief rabban were named to give the two principal Divan officers an additional year of experience.

Willis, a native of Washington, is a director and trust officer of the National Metropolitan Bank, a director of the Northwest Federal Savings and Loan Association and the Home Building Association, and secretary and director of the Fussell-Young Ice Cream Co.

Board of Trade Member

His fraternal affiliations include St. John's Lodge, F. A. A. M., of which he was master in 1929 and 1932; Mount Vernon chapter, R. A. M.; Washington Commandery, Knights Templar; Albert Pike Consistory, M. R. S., and Capitol Court, R. O. J.

He also is a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the District Bar Association, American Bar Association and the Sons of the Revolution.

MEADE CONTINUES 'WILD RIDE;' WINS 3

Brings Home Endymion In Feature

Rides Bosonia and Pordina; Now Leads Other Jockeys; Has Remarkable Record

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 16.—Don Meade, who needed only a few days of brilliant riding to become the Hialeah fans' favorite, gave one of his finest exhibitions today to bring home C. S. Bromley's Endymion in the Tamiami Claiming Handicap at the Miami track.

Endymion, the favorite at $5.90 for $2, just lasted to beat out the second choice, Bob's Boys, from the Cosgrave Stable, as Meade handrode the winner through the last furlong. E. A. Bischoff's Midas was beaten by two lengths for the place. Endymion ran the mile and one-sixteenth of the turf course in 1:50 flat.

Meade had two other winners today, Pordina in the fourth race and Bosonia in the seventh, to go two up on Eddie Arcaro in the contest for riding honors. Arcaro won one race, his eighth of the meeting, with Perfect Peace.

The sloppy track that prevailed Saturday had changed to good condition under a steady sun, with the racing strip almost completely dried out. This, incidentally, was the first time at the session that a feature race had been run on the grass. It was styled for $4,500 platers.

It took a masterly ride to get Endymion "home." Meade broke the favorite well, but the speedy Billy Van Nuys was rushed out to set the pace. Meade wisely eased back around the clubhouse turn and kept his mount close on the trail into the backstretch. Then the "comeback kid" shot Endymion through on the inside approaching the far turn as the leader showed signs of distress.

Endymion held a length advantage turning for home. Bob's Boys spurted around the bend and moved up to almost even terms with the eventual winner inside the last furlong. Endymion looked beaten, but Meade held the colt together and put up a great hand ride through the desperate final drive. Midas easily held the others under control.

Chance King just lasted to win by a head from Clap In in the mile and a furlong sixth contest. Lovick was third, four lengths away.

For the second time in a row, Shadytown proved a bust as favorite when he failed to finish in the money in the fourth contest. The gelding was unable to take the early lead he apparently needs to win, and finished in the ruck. Pordina, with Don Meade handling the reins, proved an easy winner with two lengths to spare over Lassator. William Palmer was third. Pordina ran past Lassator before turning for home, then drew away without being extended. The mare was an 8-to-1 chance.

Here's Latest In Proselyting: What, No Lollypops!

San Francisco, Jan. 15 (AP).—Charges that San Francisco high school coaches have been inducing athletes to enroll in their schools by promising them ice cream cones and free street car rides will be investigated tomorrow by the Academic Athletic Association, Chairman Arthur Fagin said today.

Fagin said while there is no association rule against the alleged practice of inducing junior high school graduates to enroll in high schools outside their districts, the body will go into the question tomorrow to determine whether charges warrant regulations against proselyting.

Brewers Acquire 3 New Players

The official signing of three new players to contracts was announced by Coach Joe Dreyfus yesterday as Washington Heurich Brewers concluded preparation for tomorrow night's American Basketball League game with Kingston Colonials in Kingston, N. Y.

On Sunday afternoon in Heurich gymnasium the local Brewers are to play host to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Barons.

After brief trials, Cliff Keyser and Fred (Knocky) Thomas, former Delaware & Hudson players disqualified from Heurich League play on charges of professionalism, have been signed. Kit Carson, most improved player on the club and a team member since early season, also has been admitted to the fold.

Deal Junior High School Gives Athletes 'New Deal'

New Training Set-up Will Prove Boon to Coaches; Baskets Are Everywhere

By Bill Burnett.

High school basketball coaches, whose woes often seem more than they can bear, have one very big item for which to be thankful. This is the attention and training given public school lads before they come under the supervision of the high-school coaches.

Alice Deal Junior High claims one of the most thorough methods of training young basketball players. Five regular gym classes are held each week, attended each time by 45 to 60 youngsters in varied colors and lengths of gym suits. The size of the classes is unusual, but the most unusual part of the classes is their length.

Dallas Shirley, former G. W. courtman and one of the two men assigned to boys' athletics at Alice Deal, says classes are about 12 minutes longer at the Davenport street institution than at other schools, which would naturally allow for more training.

Added to this Deal boasts more baskets in its gym than any of the other junior highs. The customary six rings have been augmented by three others, built on the sides of the regular backboards. T. C. Downing, the other Deal coach, takes credit for this idea. A desire to give every lad as much basket-shooting practice as possible made the latter advisable, Downing says.

For the past three weeks Downing and Shirley have limited their gym classes to foul goal shooting. The period was ended by competition between the sections for the foul goal championship of the school.

Now the boys of Deal Junior High, many of whom will move on to Woodrow Wilson High and the instruction of Coach Tony Kupka of that school, are seriously engaged in learning the "snow-bird." Shirley says it's the most "sought-after shot in basketball." The schedule will be "snow-bird" practice from this week until far into February.

Men in All Walks of Life Pay Tribute to Col. Ruppert

Late Owner of World Champion Yankees Mourned by Thousands at Last Rites

By Gayle Talbot,

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 16.—Col. Jacob Ruppert was buried today after his friends and the church had paid him moving tribute in a solemn high requiem mass in beautiful St. Patrick's Cathedral.

More than 4,000 mourners filled the cathedral and other thousands stood outside in the cold during the service for the fabulously wealthy little brewer and owner of the New York Yankees who died last Friday after a long, painful illness. Traffic for a time was paralyzed on Fifth avenue.

Big men of the sports, financial and political world joined in the sad homage. Many of his baseball players, present and past, were there to say good-bye to the man whose liberality hiked baseball salaries to their present high level.

The mass, sung by the full cathedral choir of 18 male voices, lasted for nearly an hour, solemn and sad for the most part, concluding on a majestic note as the colonel's body was carried up the broad aisle and out of the cathedral. The thousands in the street bared their heads as the casket was placed in a hearse.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and Senator Robert Wagner led the procession of honorary pallbearers down the aisle to where Col. Rupert's body rested under the high altar. They were followed by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, President William Harridge, of the American League; Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees; Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and other notables of the sports world. There were tears in the eyes of Ruth and Gehrig.

In the crowded pews were thousands who had known and loved the colonel. The baseball writers of New York attended in a body, as did Ruppert Brewery employes. Owners Tom Yawkey, of the Boston Red Sox, and Clark Griffith, of the Washington Senators, were there.

Paul Derringer, Contract Signed, Looks to Big Year

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—Paul Derringer looked forward to the National League pennant race today with the confidence of a pitcher who has a signed contract in his pocket and feels a lot of winning games in his arm.

The Cincinnati Reds wouldn't give the big right-hander a chance to pull his usual holdout act this winter.

"They called me in the day before the season closed, put a blank contract in front of me and asked me to fill it out. I did. They said it was okeh, so that was that," Derringer explained.

"This is the first year I haven't held out, but what could be fairer than the way the Reds treated me? Nothing. And a man can't hold out under those circumstances."

Noted Chicago Skater Dies After Operation

Boston, Jan. 16 (AP).—Edward A. Mahlke, 48, business manager of the "Ice Follies of 1939" which closed an engagement here last night, died today. He suffered an embolism after an operation last Wednesday for appendicitis.

Archibald May Box Leo Rodak In Providence

New State Law Paves Way for Title Fight; Ahearn Says It's His

A fresh cloud of trouble settled ominously over Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's noble nob yesterday when the junior partner and matchmaker for the firm of Turner & Ahearn, Ltd., heard Providence, R. I., is seeking a Joey Archibald-Leo Rodak world featherweight championship bout.

The new law, permitting 15-round bouts in the State, was designed for the specific purpose of getting the match in Joey's native city. Promoter Manuel Almeida already has made both principles an attractive offer, and expects the match, if made, to gross $20,000.

"They can't do that to me," Ahearn snorted yesterday. "They can't do that. I've got the inside track on that match, and I'm gonna put it in the ball park early in spring. I'll fight that Almeida to the Supreme Court if he tries to get it away from me. It's mine, and Joe and me intend to put it on here."

But Almeida, it appears, has other ideas about the match, and is bending every effort to close the deal. Archibald's knockout by Scalzo has not dimmed his popularity in Providence, and Almeida feels it is the logical site for the championship contest.

To keep the record straight, let it be known that a faulty mouthpiece was more to blame for Joey Archibald's recent knockout at Petey Scalzo's hands than the round-house right Scalzo pumped to his jaw. Even Joey will admit, of course, that the blow had something to do with it, but the "teeth," he insists, "started the trouble."

Western A. C. Wins Double-Header

Western A. C. basketball men improved their chances for the unlimited sandlot title last night by winning two games in a row, Navy Yard Marines was the first victim, 53-25. In the second game, Murray Realtors also fell, 39-25. The Chism brothers were the stars of both games, amassing 43 points between them.

Western A. C. is in need of competition. It has open dates on January 23 and 26. Teams wishing to play may call Michigan 2699 between 5 and 7 p. m.

Marine Barracks Beats Agriculture Five

A field goal by John Sakala in the closing seconds enabled the Marine Barracks quintet to shade the Department of Agriculture five, 38-37, last night to put both teams in a tie for third place in the United States Government Basketball League.

Bolling Field aviators continued in a tie for second place when the CCC (NP-7) team forfeited. With Paul Blumensasdt and Cosse leading the attack, the Army Medical Center of Walter Reed Hospital turned back the Procurement five, 34-24.

Operation Success, Johnny Allen Returns to Home

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—Johnny Allen, the Cleveland pitcher, came to his winter home today to recuperate from an operation for the removal of a bone splinter from his high-priced pitching arm.

ALLEN

"The operation was 100 per cent," Allen said. "A little chip of bone off my elbow had worked loose and lodged beneath a muscle which caused all my trouble late last season. The surgeon went in, lifted out the bone chip and that's all there was to it.

"Right now I am looking for my best season this year. I am going to Hot Springs, Ark., the first of February for a month of exercises and build up before I report to the training camp at New Orleans March 1. From then on I'll be as good as ever."

Bewhiskered Gent Added to Mat Card

A newcomer to this precinct will make his mat debut on the resin flecked carpet at Turner's Arena Thursday night in the person of "Whisker" Wells, who tangles with Angelo Savoldi in a 30-minute preliminary.

In the wake of the Golden Terror, a fat funster who creates excitement every time he appears here, the bearded whozis probably will play the leading villain role this week. His beard gives him a perfect mask for the part, and he has a few private traits peculiar to the role.

Buck Newsom Convicted Of Drunken-Driving

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 16 (AP).—Judge Robert Cotten, of Fuquay Springs, said today that he had convicted Buck Newsom, pitcher for the St. Louis Browns, on a charge of drunken-driving.

Newsom was fined $250 and costs, the minimum under the State law, last Wednesday, Judge Cotten said.

An appeal bond of $200 was set. The judge said he understood Newsom had appealed to the Superior Court.

Mazza Kayoed By Archibald; Fans Boo Bout

Bob Wilson Takes Semifinal in 2d Comeback Attempt

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In one of the worst atrocities ever perpetrated on the public, Joey Archibald, of Providence, hailed as featherweight champion in New York, knocked out Jerry Mazza, of Brooklyn, after 2 minutes 55 seconds of the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout at Turner's Arena.

Mazza (128¼) never had a chance. He was down four times in the first round, absolutely helpless as Archibald measured him and murdered him with right-hand shots to the jaw. The bell saved him as he lay helpless outside of the ropes, and while the crowd hissed and booed they dragged him to his corner to be revived for the second.

The second was as bad as the first. Mazza rallied briefly early in the session, swung a left to the mid-section, and grazed Joey's jaw with a right before Archibald again brought his heavy artillery into action. It was a sickening sight.

The audience, already filing out of the arena, paused to hoot some more and plead with Referee Eddie LaFond to halt the slaughter. Twice Mazza dangled helplessly on the ropes, his face creased in pain, as Archibald cold-bloodedly pumped an unerring stream of overhand rights to the head.

The ropes held Mazza upright, and he refused to go down and get the benefit of a count, thus, as he left the ropes each time on rubbery legs and looked through bleary eyes at his tormenter, LaFond was obliged to step back and let Archibald come in for more target practice.

Mazza finally toppled to the gray, resin-flecked canvas in the second round, but gamely struggled to his feet after taking nine. He went down again as Archibald exploded lefts and rights on his defenseless chin, and would have struggled to his feet again had not LaFond stepped in and halted the uneven affair.

Bob Wilson, 150, supposedly washed up, half-blind, and tottering toward a home for the aged, chalked up his second straight triumph by winning a unanimous decision from El Brookman in the six-round semifinal. Brookman came in at 152.

There were no knockdowns but the blond veteran's smoking left hooks jolted Brookman several times, and in the third round Brookman almost put Wilson down with a pair of solid rights to the jaw.

'Ol' Rosebud' Lucas, Released By Bucs; Holds Mound Record

Pitched 250 1-3 Straight Innings Without Relief; Was at Best in the Pinches

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 16.—Charles Fred (Ol' Rosebud) Lucas has hit the come-down trail at last.

The veteran Tennessean, who campaigned for 15 years in the National League, mostly with Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, got his unconditional release today from President Bill Benswanger. Lucas will be 37 in April.

It wasn't easy for Benswanger to let him go.

In a letter accompanying the release, the Pirate head wrote that "one of the hardest jobs a fellow in my position has to do is to write like this," and he added:

"For several years we have thoroughly enjoyed our association with you and it has been a real pleasure to have you on our club.

"But the life of a ball player is such that all things come to an end and it is with keen and extreme regret that we enclose herewith the official notice of your unconditional release."

LUCAS

It was regarded possible Lucas might catch on with another major league club. He lives with his wife and two boys in Nashville.

Down through the years Ol' Rosebud has been pitching and pinch-hitting with the best in the big-time, one of the most valuable men in a tight ball game baseball has known. Lucas, in his National League career, hung up 157 victories and was on the losing end 135 times.

Good for 4 or 5 Years More, Lucas Seeks Berth

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 16 (AP).—Taking his release from the Pittsburgh Pirates in good spirits, Charles Fred Lucas said today he felt he was "good for four or five more years in the majors."

Lucas, a resident of Nashville, declared he was in top physical condition—"in shape to take my turn with any club I happen to sign with."

Bucky Harris

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Ten

NO TEAM IN A WORLD SERIES EVER received inspired leadership of the type that Bucky Harris gave his Washington club in the 1924 series against the Giants. But, in the hysteria of the times, the "boy manager" of the Nats was applauded chiefly for his managerial tactics, not his performances on the field.

Every Washingtonian remembers, if course, the 1924 World Series. He remembers most vividly Walter Johnson's superb comeback in the seventh and final game, and Earl McNeely's famed "pebble" hit that brought the series to a happy end. And he remembers, too, Roger Peckinpaugh's valiant play at shortstop when, wracked with pain, he was strapped and taped like an Egyptian mummy in an effort to delay his complete collapse.

But the competitive hero of that World Series was not Johnson, or McNeely, or Peck. Nor was it Goose Goslin whose home-run bat boomed throughout, or Muddy Ruel, who scored the winning run. It was Bucky Harris, who by his own play set a brilliant example for his club.

Bucky Harris, a .268 hitter, rose to the heights in that series. He led the entire Washington club at bat with his .333 average. The 11 hits he made were more than any other player of either club collected in the series. Bucky was the epitome of the opportunist. Throughout the pennant race, he had been able to make only one home run. Yet he rapped out two important homers in the seven-game World Series.

SAVE FOR BUCKY HARRIS THERE would have been no seventh game of the series. With the Giants needing only one more victory to clinch the series, the Nats staved off defeat by winning the sixth game by a 2-to-1 score. Who drove in those two Washington runs? Bucky Harris. In the thrilling seventh game, the score was tied at 3 to 3 at the end of the ninth inning. Who drove in those three Washington runs? Manager Bucky Harris.

Not given particularly to hunches, Bucky had a strong hunch after the sixth game that Washington would win the seventh and the world championship. His hunch developed from a little ceremony following the sixth game at the Polo Grounds. Fifteen years ago the World Series schedule was not fixed as it is now. A toss of a coin decided the locale of the seventh game, if a seventh game was necessary.

Commissioner Kenesaw Landis called Manager Harris and John McGraw to his field box at the Polo Grounds following the completion of the sixth contest and announced he was going to toss the coin. "One of you gentlemen call it," said Landis. "Take your choice, Mr. McGraw," said Bucky when the silver half-dollar was in mid-air. McGraw called "heads." The coin dropped to the ground, bounced on a concrete drain and rolled merrily 20 feet away before it wobbled and fell, showing "tails." Harris chose Griffith Stadium as the scene of the seventh game.

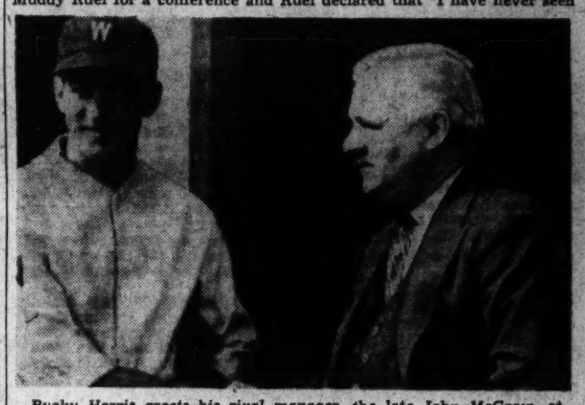
That coin-toss did, in effect win the World Series for Washington. For had the final game been played at the Polo grounds, the home run Bucky Harris hit in the seventh inning to tie the score at 3-3 would have been a mere outfield fly. In Washington it dropped inside the temporary bleachers in center field. And Earl McNeely's series-winning hit would not have found that historic pebble which sent it hopping over Freddie Lindstrom's head for a freak single.

THAT SEVENTH GAME WAS A COMPLETE tactical and competitive triumph for young Bucky Harris over the veteran John McGraw. The dashing young manager of the Nats put into effect a plan that the night before he had mulled constantly. He decided on the boldest move in all World Series history, and saw it succeed.

Before the game, Harris was fairly up against it for pitchers. He dared not send Walter Johnson back to the mound for a third time. Johnson had lost his first two starts to the Giants by scores of 4 to 3, and he lacked sufficient rest. Fred Marberry was too valuable as a relief pitcher to start the game. George Mogridge and Tom Zachary did not have the speed that Harris liked to fire against the Giants.

Harris went to Clark Griffith with his plan and received approval. He told Griffith that any strategy that would cause McGraw to take the dangerous Bill Terry out of his batting order would improve the Nats' chances. His idea was to start a right-hander, Curly Ogden, thus causing McGraw to put the left-handed Terry in the game. Then he would relieve Ogden after he had pitched to one batter and send in the left-handed Mogridge. Thus, he hoped, McGraw would substitute George Kelly for Terry.

Mogridge warmed up in the bull pen as Ogden went to the mound for the start of the game. Freddie Lindstrom was the first batter, and Ogden struck him out on three pitched balls. So impressive did Ogden appear that Harris wavered on his original plan. He called Catcher Muddy Ruel for a conference and Ruel declared that "I have never seen



Bucky Harris greets his rival manager, the late John McGraw, at the start of the 1924 World Series

Ogden have so much stuff out there." Ogden had folded his glove, tucked it in his pocket and started for the dugout, to the amazement of the jam-packed stadium.

Harris waved Ogden back to the mound, patted him on the shoulder and told him, "Let's see how long you can keep this up." Ogden was willing. But the next batter he walked, and Harris called for Mogridge. He decided to go through with his original strategy.

As Bucky had hoped, McGraw withdrew Terry from the line-up with Mogridge in action for the Nats, and inserted George Kelley. Thus, when Walter Johnson, who went to the mound in the ninth, was n difficulties, he was able to purposely pass Ross Young and concentrate on Kelley. Twice, with men on base and the score tied, Johnson fanned Kelley to retire the side.

EVENTUALLY CAME THE WASHINGTON HALF of the twelfth. Muddy Ruel, hitless throughout the series, popped a high foul to Hank Gowdy for what appeared a routine out. Gowdy flung off his mask, got under the ball and, as he stuck out his mit for the catch, he stepped on his mask and went down. The ball dropped safely and Ruel was reprieved. Then followed Ruel's first hit of the series—a two-bagger down the left-field line.

With one out, McNeely was at bat, and Harris was chafing in the little batter's circle, awaiting his own turn. Here was a chance to end all of the tension and clinch the series. Bucky was wishing he were at bat. He was "hot" during this World Series and supremely confident that he could get that run home somehow.

And then he saw McNeely swing. It was a routine grounder, slapped toward Fredde Lindstrom. With Lindstrom set for the pickup and with an easy throw to first for the out looming, panic broke out in Griffith Stadium. Forty thousand fans saw McNeely's meek grounder hit some object three yards in front of the Giants' third baseman and take a weird hop into left field for a single.

Harris, leaping to his feet, wondered if Muddy Ruel would ever make it to the plate from second base. Ruel was a slow runner, but on this occasion it appeared to Harris that he was on a treadmill. Bucky shouted, waved Ruel on frantically. Irish Meusel in left field, had a potent arm and could possibly throw him out. But Ruel had rounded third, was well on his way to the plate when Meusel fielded the ball. On another day, Harris might have counted Ruel as good as home. But it was not until Meusel, recognizing that he had no chance to make a throw that would beat Ruel to the plate, calmly stuck the ball in his pocket, that Harris was positive the game and the 1924 World Series was won.

Dick Metz Beats 'Dutch' Harrison in $5,000 Open Play-Off

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Somebody should have told Mr. Joe Carr, president of the National Professional Football League, that the football season had ended weeks ago. The sorry spectacle at Los Angeles on Sunday might have been avoided. When only 15,000 customers turned out to watch the Champion New York Giants play a highly publicized All-Star team, pro football took a horrible rap.

POVICH

The fans stayed away in droves despite the fact that the Giants are known as one of those super teams, and despite the fact that the line-up of the All-Stars included such as Sammy Baugh, Clark Hinkle, Ernie Pinckert and other names that have been headline stuff for years. And the explanation is simple enough. Folks don't give a hoot about football in mid-January.

And the sooner the pro football big wigs realize it, the sooner they will get smart. Pro football last year had its most successful season. Attendance increased and the sport established itself as a big league game. But apparently the fact that folks could get weary of it never suggested itself to the league officials. The game cannot help but lose caste when it fails to attract no more than a 15,000 crowd to a contest involving the league champions.

It may be difficult to get excited about a football game played 3,000 miles away with no title of any kind at stake, but it can be significant. It can show that the pros had best pack their togs away and forget football when the league season ends. Their exhibition games aren't worth the trouble. Los Angeles proved that. Los Angeles was supposed to be virgin territory for the big league teams; it was supposed to be crying for the appearance of the National League champions, yet it turned out only 15,000 fans.

Pay Scale at Fault

For several years now the pros have had the misguided idea that they could go out to the provinces and clean up financially after the league season has closed. Last year the Redskins played four barnstorming games and they cost George Marshall several thousand dollars of his league profits.

Sharing in the exhibition game spoils, if any, is supposed to be the reward of the players on the championship team. The players cannot be blamed for coveting the trips with their promise of extra money. The financial structure of the pro game is at fault. If they pair the players worthwhile salaries they would be satisfied with their pay for the league season.

But as long as the proleague maintains its present pay scale, the players cannot be blamed for seeking additional emoluments on barnstorming trips. The National League attempts to reward its players who participate in the league play-off game by cutting them in for a share of the gate, but too often that share is laughable. In the 1937 title game between the Redskins and Bears, for example, the Washington players received only $200 each, a figure which was below the per-game pay of many of them.

Football pay is in striking contrast to the share baseball players receive as their reward for their world series participation. In many years, the individual share of world series winners has topped $6,000, and rarely has the loser's share been less than $3,500.

Baseball Offers Tip

George P. Marshall and sundry other football club owners have been given to boasting the rapid strides being made by their game, yet during the past six weeks two valuable Redskins—Riley Smith and Bill Hartman—chose to accept assistant coaching posts at only moderately well-known colleges rather than to continue in pro football. And the salar angle doubtless influenced their choices.

Eight of the ten clubs in the National League showed a profit in 1938, but there is little evidence that the pay scale will be revised upward next season. That was one of the secrets of the success of baseball in its formative days; at least since 1900. As profits increased, salaries went up until a big-league baseball job was highly prized by the youth of the land. A college graduate is fitted, academically, to earn more than pro football can pay him, with unusual cases excepted.

But, getting back to pro football barnstorming, it is significant that Los Angeles, the same town that turned out more than 90,000 for the Rose Bowl game, was cold to the Giants-All-Stars affair. The football fans were there, but apparently they didn't care to see a meaningless game.

Big league baseball long ago realized that when the baseball season ended, it ended. It wouldn't permit its World Series champions to go on tour as a team. It would not even permit the two World Series teams to go on tour with each other the following spring under the guise of spring training. Baseball felt that such affairs cheapened the game. The football people are slow in getting around to that idea.

Chicagoan Victorious By 1 Stroke

New Champion Bags A 69 in Deciding Round to Pocket $1,200 Prize

By the United Press.

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 16.—Dick Metz, 30-year-old Chicago professional, won the $5,000 Oakland Open golf tournament at Sequoyah Country Club today, defeating E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Oak Park, Ill., by one stroke in an 18-hole play-off of their first-place tie.

Metz shot a 69, one under par, while Harrison had an even par 70. The winner clipped a stroke off par on the outgoing nine, shooting a 34.

Metz won $1,200, while Harrison received second-place money of $750. They also split 50 per cent of the gate receipts of the pay-off.

Bags Two Birdies

Their special match followed their deadlock at 72 holes in the tournament which ended yesterday. Each had shot 274, six under par.

Two birdies, one on a putt of 12 feet and the other on a 7-footer gave Metz his one stroke advantage on the first nine. Harrison made the most spectacular shot when he dropped a 40-foot putt for a birdie on the third hole.

One stroke to the good at the turn, Metz stretched his advantage on the tenth with a birdie 3. Harrison reduced the margin on the twelfth with a par 3 when his rival's second shot was wild.

Metz Again Leads

On the thirteenth Metz again took a two-stroke lead when Harrison's putting touch deserted him and he took three putts. Another 10-foot putt sent Harrison back into the running on the fifteenth, giving him a birdie.

They shot the last three holes even, each clipping a stroke from par on the eighteenth and leaving Metz one stroke to the good.

Lee Rosen, 129, of Baltimore, scored a technical knockout over Billy Pickeral, 127, of Sycamore, Va., as Referee Ray Bowen stopped the one-sided bout after 1 minute 10 seconds of the fourth and final round had elapsed.

Johnny Saverino, 132, of New York, was credited with a technical knockout over Joe Sole, 128¼, of Baltimore, after 2 minutes 35 seconds of the fourth of a scheduled six-round engagement. Sole was exhausted, not seriously damaged, and disgusted when Ray Bowen halted hostilities. Sole went down for a nine-count in the previous round as Saverino cornered him and showered him with rights and lefts.

Merrick Boy Boxers Defeat Alexandrians

3 Technical K.O.'s Feature Battles; Score Is 4 to 3

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 16.—Merrick Boys Club boxers spoiled the debut of the Alexandria Boys Club ring team here tonight, nosing out the inexperienced local squad, 4 to 3, in an action-packed card. Bill Mattingly's technical knockout over Henry Grimm, local 147-pounder, in the final bout of the evening decided the match in favor of the Washingtonians, after Novell O'Leary, Merrick 110-pounder, had evened it up by winning a technical knockout over Dick Downey in the semi-finals.

Firemen Blasted By Investigation

Scoreless from the field in first half play, D. C. Fire Department last night was routed by Federal Bureau of Investigation in one end of a Heurich Basketball Leageu double-header in Heurich gymnasium, 40 to 12.

Virginia Open Pin Tourney Draws 70

Three Shifts Are in Prospect if Other Bowlers Enter

A record entry for the fourth annual Virginia State open duckpin tourney, scheduled Saturday at Galt Davis pin plant in Rosslyn, was assured as Davis had the names of 70 starters yesterday. If the field increases the event may have to be run in three shifts.

Paul Jarman, a member of the host alleys, won the tournament last year in Richmond by a 40-pin margin over Chick Thumm, Norfolk, while other former winners are Joe Harrison, in '37, and A. A. Hosselton, Richmond, present president of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, in 1936. Harrison's 1,399 total is the record.

First prize money is guaranteed to be $100, and if the field is over last year's record entry of 68, the winner's share of the cash may run as high as $150. The entrance fee is $7.50.

The first shift in the initial block of the ten-game event will start at 1 p. m., with the second at 3 and the third, if necessary, at 4:45. The final block shifts will start at 7, 9 and 10:45, if needed.

The usual field of local top-notch duckpinners, headed by the Nationals' head pinman, Astor Clarke, will start, including Perce Wolfe, Joe Harrison, Frank Mischou, Hokie Smith, winner of three sweepstakes this season; Ed Blakeney, Perce Ellett, Howard Parsons, Eddie Espey, Reds Megaw, Joe Freschi, Lou Jenkins, Brad Mandley and defending champion Jarman.

Billy Gauer, high average man in the three previous rollings of the tournament, from Norfolk, heads the Old Dominion delegation, that includes Sugar Cain, Jim Wallace, Oden Hall, Art Carter, Herman Fleming, Connie Haralson and Bob Creamer, of Norfolk, and entries from Harrisonburg, Waynesboro, Richmond, Roanoke, Winchester.

John Schmitt Well Deserves His Nickname

Georgetown Athlete Rated Fastest in College Sports

By Jack Munhall.

That title given Georgetown's Flying Dutchman, Johnny Schmitt, by Elmer Ripley and Joe Judge and the Hilltop student body possibly is exaggerated, but those fans who have seen the stocky junior streak up base lines or dribble down the court would hesitate to table it "absurd."

SCHMITT

This in spite of the fact that Schmitt in build is the utter antithesis of the popular conception of a sprinter. Five-feet 11-inches tall, weighing 180 pounds and possessed of a bull neck, bulgy shoulders and chunky, muscular legs, Schmitt looks like anything but chained lightning—until he gets in action!

Born in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1917, Schmitt prepped at St. John's High School there and twice earned All-Scholastic honors in both basketball and baseball. At St. John's which also sent to the Hilltop such court stars as Ed Hargaden and Don Gibeau, both All-Eastern Conference selections in recent years, Schmitt captained the baseball and basketball teams in his senior year.

From the very beginning it was obvious that Georgetown had an unusually talented and versatile athlete in this pleasant-faced German boy. He was a star of the freshman basketball team and last season, his first in varsity baseball, he gained recognition as one of Georgetown's leading hitters and an outfielder second to none. He hit .325 and in the field his tremendous speed and strong throwing arm was the dread of opposing batters.

Needless to say, he was easily the Hoyas top base stealer. Many were the times he singled, stole second and third, and scored on an infield out.

He has three younger brothers, including 19-year-old-twins. Ray and Bob. Ray, now at Scarborough Prep School in New York, is considered a better athlete than was Johnny at the same age, and is ticketed for Georgetown. Bob, not an athlete, is planning to attend Syracuse.

Tolmich Enters Millrose

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Allan Tolmich, of Detroit, outstanding hurdler of the 1938 indoor track campaign, today filed his entry for the 60-yard dash and 60-yard high hurdles in the Millrose A. A. games February 4 at Madison Square Garden. Tolmich will attempt to repeat the double he scored in these events at last year's meet.

Patty Berg Tops Field With a 78

PATTY BERG

Mrs. Davy, District Golfer, Scores 90 In Augusta Play

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 16.—Patty Berg, National Women's Champion from Minneapolis, is apparently all set for another sweep of the Southern tournaments as the red-haired coed took a one stroke lead over the field in the third annual Titlist's Tournament today at Augusta Country Club.

Miss Berg held the slim margin over Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., who carded 39, 40—79. The leader was out in 38 and back in 40 for the pace-setting score of 78.

Trailing Miss Miley, in the third place, was Katherine Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., who carded 39, 41—80, while Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, Little Rock, was next with 42, 39—81. Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, was only four strokes from the lead with 82, with the veteran Mrs. Opal S. Hill, one of the two professionals entered, tied with Laddie Irwin, New Jersey junior champion, and Isabel Ogilvie, of this city, all with 87s. Miss Kirby had the lowest nine of the day, out in 37, but required 45 strokes on the return trip.

Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional Country Club of Washington, D. C., turned in a card of 90, followed by Helen Waring, Pinehurst, 93, and Mrs. Lillia Watson, Scotland, 94.

Budge, Vines to Make Personal Appearance

Arrangements were completed yesterday for the personal appearance of Donald Budge, former king of the amateur tennis world, and Ellsworth Vines, recognized as world's professional net champion, in a local preview to their match next Monday night at Ritchie Coliseum, College Park.

The two racquet wielders, currently engaged in a coast-to-coast series, will appear on Monday afternoon between 1 and 2 o'clock at the Hecht Co. Men's Sports Shop to meet Washington tennis fans in person, discuss the highlights of tennis and then autograph pictures of themselves for free distribution.

Hundred Expected In Shoreham Swim

Over 100 swimmers from the East and South are expected to participate in the Shoreham indoor sprint and diving championships, to be held Saturday in the Venetian Pool at the Shoreham Hotel. Finals will be run at right, and to avoid the possibility of the meet becoming tiresome, eliminations will take place in the afternoon.

The event, under the auspices of the D. C. A. A. U., will be featured by two National junior championship races this year, the 50-yard freestyle for men and the 100-yard backstroke for women. Any registered amateur is eligible. There will be five events for men, regardless of age, and four for women. A 50-yard freestyle race for boys of 16-years or less is also on the program.

Mako and Tidball Win Doubles Title

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—Gene Mako and Jack Tidball, both of Los Angeles, won the doubles crown in the Florida State tennis competition here today after resuming play in a five-set match halted last night by darkness.

They defeated Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 8—6, 5—7, 7—5, 1—6, 6—4.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Loose Threads

New York, Jan. 16.—There seem to be a few matters that have accumulated over the week-end which demand attention, including a pile of mail and several items of interest in the papers. Perhaps we had better just run through them briefly before turning to the week's work.

VIDMER.

There has been a further reduction in the winter book price against Seabiscuit for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, the odds having been cut from four, two and even to 7-to-2, 8 to 5, and 4 to 5. The other two most recent, and perhaps significant reductions, have been against Sir Raleigh, who was 60 to 1 and is now 50 to 1, and Honey Cloud, cut from 100 to 1 down to 60 to 1. Dauber is the second choice at 15 to 1, and five are grouped at 20 to 1. They are Heelfly, Ligaroti, Main Man, Porter's Mite and Specify . . .

It seems only right that Max Baer should be matched with Lou Nova before either of them go cascading into a battle with Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight championship. All that Baer has to recommend him for a return meeting with the Brown Bomber is a victory over Tommy Farr, and that seems hardly sufficient in view of the fact that Red Burman could offer the same qualifications. Of course, Nova hasn't much on his side of the agreement either, having beaten Gunnar Barlund and Farr in moving into the picture. Maybe the winner should meet and beat Tony Galento, before being accepted as the logical challenger . . .

From Harlan Howard comes a word or so of praise for Samuel D. Riddle, who refused to sell Man o' War last week, saying flatly that the wonder horse of the American turf is not for sale. Mr. Howard suspects that the acquisition of Man o' War by a Hollywood producer would result in a super-colossal, stupendous something or other and he thinks that Big Red has earned the peace and quiet of Faraway Farm which has been assured him through a trust fund Mr. Riddle has established for the purpose.

"His day of achievement is past," writes Mr. Howard. "Nothing that he ever can do in the future will compare with what he has accomplished, and he has earned the reward that he is getting; the greatest reward it is possible for him to receive—a good home and tender, affectionate care."

Old Guard Relieved

There has been some discussion as to whether Sammy Snead's money prizes won in golf tournaments last year really constituted a record, it having been claimed that the $19,534.49 he collected higher and yon between January 1 and December 31 was surpassed by Gene Sarazen, who won more than $21,000 during the season of 1930. But Gene, himself, has pointed out that his winnings were not accumulated in a calendar year, but between one spring and the next.

And speaking of golf, with Jimmy Demaret winning the Los Angeles Open and Dick Metz beating Dutch Harrison for top money in the Oakland Open, first of the P. G. A. tournaments on the winter schedule, it might appear that the old guard is being relieved. However, the old guard of golf is not at full strength yet. Ralph Guldahl is recovering from an operation and will not join the tour until next month at San Antonio, where Paul Runyan, who is spending January in Miami, also will report. Sarazen and Picard won't start firing until the caravan reaches New Orleans a week later.

Among other bits of gossip along the winter circuit are the following: Henry Cotton, British headliner, will be here this summer for competition and an exhibition tour—Jimmy Thomson, already recognized as one of the game's longest drivers, is hitting the ball farther than ever off the tees—Clayton Heafner, of Greensboro, N. C., making his first tour to the Coast, has caught the attention of the veteran players—the leading pros are bearing down a little extra with the knowledge that the selection of the Ryder Cup team will be based to a large extent on their winter play.

The Mungo Case

The case of Van Lingle Mungo, which seems to be reopened every winter, is beginning to be a little boring. There is much to do about the fact that the big pitcher of the Brooklyn team is holding out and refusing to sign, but after looking over his record one might be excused for murmuring, "What of it?" According to the records Mungo is a great pitcher only in the minds of the Brooklyn Ball Club and Mr. Mungo himself. And whether he signs or not is a matter over which I can't seem to work up any fit of hysterics . . .

But then perhaps you can't get excited about the fact that Sonja Henie opened a week of skating at Madison Square Garden tonight either. Of course, it's all a matter of taste, but you take Mungo and I'll take Henie.

Georgetown Frosh Beat Young Terps, 37-29; Fifth in Row

Late Spurt By G.U. Five Saves Game

Farris Hits Hoop for Couple to Ice Game in Closing Minutes; Hard Fought Battle

The four-game winning streaks of Georgetown and Maryland University's undefeated freshman teams collided yesterday at College Park and the result was a fifth straight for the Hoyas, 37 to 29, in a game that was really closer than the final score.

For with two minutes to play the Georgetown courtmen led by a bare 3-point margain, 28 to 25, and the Little Terps were fast closing the gap until Farris stepped in with a pair of timely snowbirds and boosted the score beyond reach.

Maryland led for only a few seconds playing time, a 16-15 advantage at halftime. Jim Kiernan, of New York City, took a personal hand in the matter in the early minutes of the third period and dropped five consecutive field goals for the Hoyas and they were ahead 25-18. The Little Hoyas made it 28-21, when "Pop" Wharton and Merle Duvall scored for the Terps to make it close but it was the hosts final bid.

Coach Elmer Ripley made one of his few appearances on the playing floor late in the second quarter when Referee Dallas Shirley called a decision that was puzzling to all. Charles Bowers, of the Terps, shot from near midcourt and on the play his teammate, Vannais fouled Miller of the Hoyas. Shirley allowed the basket and gave Miller a foul shot. The entire Georgetown team protested and "Rip" rushed on the court, but the decision stood.

The Frosh fell in with the rivalry between the schools on one occasion when a member of one team went out with four fouls his man came over with a "nice game" remark and was greeted with "get out before I punch you in the nose." They left the gym arm in arm after the game, patting each other on the back.

Kiernan's third quarter spree gained him scoring honors with 14 points, with Duvall, former Mount St. Joe star, second with 13, from three field goals and seven successful attempts from the foul line.

Jim Giebel Hangs to Ball in Hoya-Terp Frosh Clash

Jim Giebel, former St. John's prep ace, hangs to the ball in a scramble during the Georgetown–Maryland Freshman game yesterday at College Park, won by the Hoyas, 37 to 29. It was the fifth straight for the victors while the little Terps suffered their first loss in five games

Eastern and Tech Fives Clash Today in Inter-High Feature

Game Slated at Tech Gym at 3:30 o'Clock; Anacostia and Central Meet at Same Time

Eastern High, defending high school cage champion and winner of four out of the last five races, engages Tech today on the Tech floor at 3:30 p. m. The other half of the original double-header, between anacostia and the mystery team from Central, will take place at Anacostia gym, a special concession granted the Indians due to the fact that it is their first year in the series. The latter game also starts at 3:30.

Despite the number of games each has played so far, picking the winner of the Eastern-McKinley tangle may be difficult. Tech has the best paper record, but Eastern was able to whip a team that beat the Manual Trainers, St. John's. Both squads are in perfect shape for their opening endeavor.

Chances of Anacostia starting off its series participation with a victory were lessened slightly last night when Coach Julian Colangelo announced that several members of the squad are suffering from colds. None of them are serious enough to keep the boys from playing. Though Coach Jack Ray, at Central, lost his star center, Lewis McKinney, and must wait until his third inter-high game before playing lanky Dick Farr because of studies, he expressed satisfaction with the remaining members and said they should win.

St. John's, whose latest start was a loss to Eastern, also picks up its schedule today, playing Woodrow Wilson in the first portion of a home-and-home agreement. The game is at Wilson, at 3.30. St. Albans entertains the powerhouse quintet of Episcopal High, of Alexandria, at the same time. The only other prep engagement features Maryland University's freshman quint against George Washington High at the College Park court.

Murphy Speaks Tomorrow

H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University, will be guest speaker at tomorrow's luncheon of the Optimist Club of East Washington. His topic will be "The Business Aspect of Athletics."

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al:

Trainer George Conway says he will ask War Admiral for some more speed in a workout this week. The Derby-Preakness-Belmont winner may see action early next month. Trainer Ben Jones has taken an option on the services of Apprentice Al Snider with an agreement that he may purchase the lad's contract on February 1. The boy, who thus joins the powerful Woolford Farm Stable, was the third leading rider at New Orleans before shifting over here. Son of War, a recent winner here, is the first horse owned by A. T. Winmill, Long Island sportsman. Two track records have been set here since the season began. H. S. Wilson's Dalamac hung up a mark of 1:52 for a mile and a furlong over the turf course and B. Lewin's Knight Gallant turned in 1:37 2-5 for a mile and three-sixteenths over the main course. Eddie Robart, an apprentice, is regarded as a fine jockey prospect. He rode 26 winners to lead the saddle artists at New Orleans before coming to this track. Starter George Cassidy is doing a good job with the local bangtails. Several times he has gotten an eight-race program off in a total of 18 minutes. Warlaine, a horse with three New Orleans handicaps to his credit, was shipped into Hialeah. He is the property of Weston W. Adams, Suffolk Downs official. The new grandstand observation terraces here have been the subject of much favorable comment and it is believed that other tracks will follow the idea. In answer to "M. K. O'B." here are the leading 1938 juveniles as listed in the Turf and Sport Digest's Roll: Colts—El Chico, Porter's Mite, Challedon, Eight Thirty, Johnstown, Volitant, Xalpa Clown, Third Degree, Benefactor. Fillies —Inscoelda, Big Hurry, Smart Crack, Dinner Date, Ciencia, Heather Time, Galley Slave, Charlotte Girl, Hauca. Incidentally, Hauca is dead. Well Clocker Mike went down swinging today. He lost $15 bucks on Mintson, beaten a neck for show at 14-1, reducing the bankroll to $327.80. But he's going right back at them tomorrow. He will play Ghost Queen $2 to win and $4 to place and Notice Me $2 to win and $4 to place.

BILL.

First race—Spin On looms as the right one in the open affair for 3-year-olds slated to start the program. This one gets in light and will have Yarberry to do the saddle work. Two Cents runs as if he's worth only slightly more than his name but with Meade aboard he may be prominent in this company. Henryels Pick for the show.

Second race—Jock's Betsy, another mount for Don Meade, seems best of the group gathered for this sprint. Modern Age was heavily backed last out and failed. Could awake in this field. Macie Margaret has plenty of closing ability and is dangerous.

Third race—Candy Hero is a bit ambitiously placed in this group but I believe the stable likes this one. The money-riding Schmidl is slated for the booting assignment and I'm going to string along. Orient Express has that smashing last as a recommendation. One Jest should go well with the featherweight.

Fourth race—Knight Gallant goes postward with 118 pounds but will have Arcaro in the saddle. The combination appears capable of taking the decision. Notice Me, in light, breaks off the rail and the 7 furlongs might be one this one wants. Bubblesome is due to be a keen factor.

Fifth race—Sirasia has plenty of foot now and should take down the chief award in a test of this nature. Rugged Red and Balmy Spring are fit as hands make horses and will be hard to keep out of the pay circle.

Sixth race—Ghost Queen may need a race. However, I have some good reports on this one and will string along with Schmidl's riding. Floragina gets in with 100 pounds and is a threat in that rigging. Rissa has speed and is scheduled to be in the thick of contention.

Seventh race—Patan downed a fair field at Bowie and is not unfamiliar with the turf course, thanks to racing in South America. This could be the right spot. Glisten has plenty of late speed and the route is right. White Ginger for the show end.

Eighth race — Harry's Dream seems suited by conditions in this test for fillies and mares. She will have the hard-riding Nash in the saddle. Brilliant Rose and Mistralkin for the place and show.

Fish and Game Map Planned By Maryland

Unique Chart Designed To Attract Hunters To Old Line State

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 16.—The sportsman scanned the map of Maryland for a picture of the fish, fowl, or animal he sought, compared it with a time table showing the expected arrival of the specie, selected the road to the area designated—and presumably returned home with the bag limit.

It may sound like a paradise reserved for sportsmen who have wasted their years in a barren happy hunting grounds—but the map is on the drafting board at the offices of the State conservation commission. Pictures of the oft nebulous specie have already been imposed upon the rough draft and time tables will soon be the subject of serious conferences.

Officials said today they expect to have the map completed by February 17. They hope it will attract more hunters and fishermen to Maryland.

While several other States have prepared maps showing the distribution of wild life, the commission said it was "the most complete game map ever put out."

Collected from game wardens and sportsmen throughout the State, the information not only shows the habitat of game but also supplies harried nimrods with locations of camping sites and, if they're interested, a natural history of the State.

Fishermen will be able to tell at a glance where bait, guides and boats may be obtained for fresh and salt water fishing.

Listed are the choice spots for catching eight fresh-water, 12 salt-water fish and also marlin, dolphin, tuna and Bonita.

If it's deer you seek, the choicest places are along the Pennsylvania line in Cecil, Harford, Frederick and Garrett counties. Deer may also be obtained in Worcester County, the map indicates, but the accompanying text will probably inform hunters the herd there is believed to have been liquidated last season when more than a dozen were slain.

The hunter who finds enjoyment in shivering in a duck blind waiting for a flock of wild-fowl, can close his eyes and point to almost any section of tidewater land.

Dapper Dans Play Chambers Quintet

One of the outstanding games in first half Heurich Amateur Basketball League competition will be offered tonight as a triple-header in Heurich gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

At 8:30 o'clock Clinton Price's high-scoring Dapper Dan club, one of the most popular teams in the city, meets the undefeated W. W. Chambers Co. tossers.

PWA faces Delaware & Hudson at 7:30 o'clock and D. C. Fire Department meets United Clay Products at 9:30.

D. C. Bankers Hold Annual Winter Dinner

Rep. Steagall and Editor Kuhns Are Principal Speakers

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Prospects for banking and business in general were outlined last night at the midwinter meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, at the Raleigh Hotel, speakers being Representative Henry B. Steagall, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, House of Representatives, and William R. Kuhns, editor of Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association.

Addressing more than 200 local bankers assembled, Representative Steagall informed them they occupied an unusual position, and faced a peculiar responsibility, their contacts touching cross-currents of opinion covering the Nation, and their responsibility not being limited to the immediate circle of their patrons. Bankers everywhere are influenced by their judgment, policies and practices, he said.

"World conditions," he warned, "present a spectable of chaos and confusion. The economic problems of this hour are without precedent. They constitute a challenge to bankers and business men, and to all who occupy positions of public trust. Unreasoning censure and criticism anywhere, and at whomsoever directed, are out of place. Our tasks demand the best of every patriotic citizen in every walk of life."

For and Against

Two lists, one of favorable factors and the other of items causing uncertainty were reviewed by Mr. Kuhns, in his address, "Business Ahead." Citing inflation, fear of mounting national debt, and fear that the deficits are out of hand, he emphasized that if this could be eradicated or turned into something less formidable most of the others would immediately disappear or become less important.

On the favorable side, he mentioned the truly phenomenal, unprecedented technological progress of the past few years. This certainly has more meaning, as far as our future prosperity and well being are concerned, than all the other considerations combined.

In every economic center there is great need for all kinds of construction and improvement, Mr. Kuhns explained, saying the striking thing is that we actually have at hand the materials, methods, distributive and productive facilities and technological skill to fill this need. Just as Nature abhors a vacuum, he felt that a situation like this is thoroughly unnatural and there is only one possible result—progress.

"With such great need of capital, and equally great supply side by side, I can't help but feel that these two elemental forces will get together," was his conclusion. "For the long-term outlook, it seems advisable at this time to watch one indicator with special care, namely—resumption of a healthy flow of private capital into new enterprises and expanding old ones. When this takes place we can call it speculation or we can call it recovery.

Cotton Futures Under Pressure For New Crops

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 16.—Reversing recent trends, the cotton market sagged badly today in the new crop positions and maintained relative steadiness in the near months. Closing prices, a shade better than the lows, were down 1 to 13 points.

Trading ring gossip atributed the pressure to professional operators and others seeking to hedge positions against the possibility of vital change in the farm program. Trade support was entered on the decline. Foreign interests took little part either way.

Opening prices were mixed with near months moderately higher on trade price fixing. Buying tapered soon after the start and for the greater part of the session the market displayed little resistance to the moderate flow of selling.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures again chalked up new low prices for the season in active trade today. Heavy liquidation uncovered stop-loss orders while support was limited to buying on scale down orders. A little late resistance withered before trade and commission house offerings. Final prices were 7 to 9 points lower on sales of 278 contracts. March finished at 7.11, May 7.20, July 7.29.

Crude oil remained quiet with prices of 57½-6 cents reported in the southeast and valley.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Trading, News, Prices Lack Definite Trend; Volume Smallest for the New Year

U. S. Government Bonds Well Supported

New York, Jan. 16.—The stock market was listed well down among the also rans in today's financial affairs. The open market place was open, according to regulations, but no one seemed to care. The volume of 666,160 shares was the smallest for this year and price changes were just what one would expect. Only a handful of the speculative leaders got as much as a point away from their closing prices of Saturday and the composite a verage of 100 representative stocks showed a meaningless decline of 0.08 point.

There was some encouragement over the belief that the threat of a crisis abroad at least had come no nearer over the week-end. There was good support for the Government bond list, aided by the rise in excess reserves. Sterling was a trifle lower in a stagnant foreign exchange market and commodities generally held near their former levels. Steel operations edged upward another point, placing the rate for this week at 52.7 per cent of capacity. The slow improvement in the rate since the holidays was taken as an evidence of the leveling off of business at this time.

In a day like today, when commissions fall far short of meeting the overhead expenses of the various firms, members naturally consider the matter of regulations as they affect volume and the thinness of the market in certain shares. Not all of such regulations are imposed by the S. E. C. The stock exchange itself has a quiver full of shafts and there are occasions when members trying to make a market feel the authorities are leaning too far on the side of regulation.

Utilities Await Decision

Utilities were little changed in today's dealings and the street was disappointed that another Monday passed without a Supreme Court decision on the TVA. One group in the street was inclined to the thought that the court might order a rehearing of the case, with Justice Frankfurter among those on the bench. It is felt in investment circles that a decision against the TVA would have an unusually salutary effect, as the TVA has come to be the outstanding example of Government interference with private enterprise. If the Administration were limited here, there is reason to believe that private utility companies would be encouraged to go ahead with expansion programs which have been held back awaiting a decision on the constitutionality of the Government's experiment in this field.

Commercial Solvents stepped out in today's trading and became the day's most active stock, rising a point on buying that was encouraged by the action of Congress Friday in limiting the expenditure of WPA funds. The company is one of those which has felt the effect of competition partially financed by Federal funds.

Consolidated Edison, North American and Engineers Public Service were the leaders among the utilities at about their former prices. Of the day's 15 most active stocks, 8 were in the power and light category. American Smelting was well supported in the metal division. Steel and Chrysler were lower and Westinghouse dropped 1½.

Treasury Bonds Strong

The feature of bond dealings on the New York Stock Exchange today, as in over-the-counter trading, was the upsurge in United States government issues, many of which were swept ahead into new high ground for over a year. No less than 12 of the Treasury bonds traded on the stock exchange established new highs, and this strength was maintained in the counter trading after the stock exchange closed.

Gains in Treasury bonds ranged up to 6-32 of a point in the official dealings. The buying was said to emanate chiefly from savings banks, life insurance companies and a few of the big banks here with large supplies of cash. The trading in governments was not particularly heavy. Offerings were so scarce that buyers had to pay good prices for any securities they dislodged.

Irregularity prevailed in corporate bond dealings, but the market was not without a number of points of marked strength. The New York Herald-Tribune index of 30 bonds showed a decline of .04 of a point, with only the second-grade rails, among the four classifications, closing higher on the day. B. M. T. and I. R. T. issues were firm, as was a liberal sprinkling of the public utilities. Portland General Electric 4½s of 1960 advanced 2¾ points. In the foreign group, the two issues of Czech 8s, which had not been traded recently, were each marked down 25 points. Italian and Japanese issues were soft.

Chemical Fund Assets Double in Quarter

New York, Jan. 16.—Net assets of Chemical Fund, Inc., during the quarter ended December 31, 1938, taking securities at market value, increased from $969,610 at September 30 to $1,962,459 at the year-end, including unrealized appreciation of $112,495, F. Eberstadt, president of the company, reported to stockholders today. The net asset value per share of 184.181 shares outstanding at the end of the year amounted to $10.65 compared with $9.80 based on 98,897 shares outstanding on September 30.

The report states that 88.93 per cent of the company's net assets at the year-end, taking securities at cost, were invested in common stocks; 4.80 per cent in preferred stocks, and 6.27 per cent in cash. United States Government bonds and accounts receivable.

Business Loans Drop $8,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks declined slightly in the week ended January 11.

The Federal Reserve Board said banks in 101 leading cities reported their business loans declined $8,000,000 to a total of $3,818,000,000 in that period. The decline was led by banks in New York City which reduced their commercial advances by $4,000,000.

TVA's 6 Months' Sales Top Full Previous Year

The Tennessee Valley Authority reported yesterday that revenue from electric power sales for the six months ended December 31 exceeded those of the entire 1938 fiscal year by 309,000.

John B. Blandford, jr., TVA general manager, said the half-year revenue was $2,615,000, compared with $2,306,000 for the full year ended last June 30. He said the estimate of $5,000,000 in revenues for 1939 apparently would be exceeded.

Retail Advertising 7.7% Under Year Ago

During that week the newspapers in the 80 reporting cities carried a total of 16,430,430 lines of retail display advertising, compared with 17,803,959 lines during the corresponding week of 1938.

Wheat Rallies After Slump To New Lows

Mill Buying Plus Short Covering Advances Prices

Chicago, Jan. 16.—After dipping to new 1939 lows, wheat prices today rallied as much as ¾ cent on buying credited to mills and previous sellers who were taking profits on their "short" positions. The close was at a small net gain for the day.

The market was honeycombed with supporting buying orders just above 68 cents for May and July contracts and 69 cents for September. Early selling prompted by the unsettled weather forecast for much of the grain belt and reports of an improved domestic moisture situation caused the decline which put quotations within range of these buying orders.

Trade was slow, however, as evidenced by the narrow range of price fluctuations most of the day, and there was no rush to accumulate contracts on the upturn. Wheat closed ⅛-⅜ higher than Saturday, May, 68¾-68⅞; July, 68⅞-69; corn, ½-½ up; May, 52⅜-52½; July, 53½-53⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye, ¼-⅜ up; lard, 2 to 7 lower.

Chesapeake Corp. Votes to Dissolve

Baltimore, Jan. 16 (AP).—Formal dissolution of the Chesapeake Corporation, intermediate holding company of the former Van Sweringen rail system, was approved today by stockholders. Merrill C. Callaway, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co., offered the resolution terminating the business of Chesapeake Corporation, formed in 1927 to acquire control of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. Guaranty Trust is the largest stockholder in Chesapeake & Alleghany Corporation, the top holding company.

Seventy-nine per cent of the stockholders were represented at today's meeting. The Alleghany Corporation owns approximately 71 per cent.

December Commodities Lowest in 29 Years

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—World basic commodity prices dropped for the week ended January 7 to 60.6 from 61 the preceding week, according to the General Motors-Cornell Index. The United States index in gold was 62.7, compared with the previous week's 63.2.

For the month of December, the world index was lowest in the 29 years covered by the index at 60.6. The monthly 1937 high, in April, was 78; the 1938 high 70.4, last January. The average for the year was 64.8, compared with 75 for the preceding year.

November Rail Net Jumps Above 1937

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission reported yesterday that net railway operating income of class one railroads in November was $49,664,681 compared with $32,519,097 in November, 1937.

Operating expenses dropped from $249,295,347 in November, 1937, to $231,257,088 in November, 1938. Operating revenues in November, 1938, were $319,681,838 compared with $318,180,377 the year before.

Babson's 8 Reasons For Building Boom

Babson Park, Mass., Jan. 16.—Roger W. Babson gave today the following reasons for predicting a broad expansion of construction:

1. Public confidence is better.
2. National income is rising.
3. People want suburban homes.
4. Choice rentals are high.
5. FHA plans are attractive.
6. Building costs are steady
7. Marriage rate is higher.
8. Shortage of million homes.

Job Security Urged by Head Of Retail Body

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Job security for workers and reports by employers to employes on the financial positions of their companies was advocated in the convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association tonight by Saul Cohn, president.

"This year should be a better one for all of us," Cohn predicted. "Our craft looks forward to 1939 as the virtual beginning of the next decade. The next decade will spotlight the retailer as a more potent factor in the American plan of life. Essentially, we have developed an adequate power to produce. We must increase the power to consume.

"Retailing has done a good job in stabilizing employment. But there are still vital needs in the general improvement of employe relations. The first is to remove job fear—no salesperson can do an outstanding job if there is continuous worry as to whether employment will last beyond the following payday. We must study the possibility of providing an assurance of continuous income."

Retail Food Prices Higher at Year-End

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Department reported yesterday an increase of 1 per cent in the retail food cost index between November 15 and December 13.

The rise was attributed to a 7.3 per cent increase in the price of butter along with higher prices for many fresh fruits and vegetables. Declines were registered by cereals, bakery goods, meats and eggs.

Bancamerica-Blair To Become Blair & Co.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Stockholders of Bancamerica-Blair Corporation will be asked at the February 21 meeting to authorize a change in name to Blair & Co., Inc., it was announced today.

The decision to revert to the latter name was taken at a directors' meeting on December 27, last, following the sale by the Bank of America of its holdings in the company during November.

Steel Operations Continue Advance

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 1 point to 52.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 51.7 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 51.7 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 29.8 per cent.

New Reliance Branch

As the result of Washington agency, Reliance Life Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, attaining its quota of more than $1,000,000 of new paid business for 1938, the company has announced establishment of a new branch office, to be known as the National Capital Department. Announcement was made at a dinner and business meeting last night at Washington Golf and Country Club, at which H. T. Burnett, vice president of the company presided, and A. D. West, secretary, attended.

Mr. Burnett presented to the department a silver tablet, on which are engraved names of the manager, D. M. Stephens, the cashier, J. A. Bryant, and 12 full time representatives who contributed to the quota. Mr. Stephens became associated with the company, in Washington, as field manager November 1, 1936, and has developed the organization to its present strength.

Beside the company officials, employees and representatives of the new department, the following guests attended: J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance of the District of Columbia, Carroll Winchester, secretary, Arlington County Chamber of Commerce; Carroll T. Scott, manager, Virginia department; H. P. Savage, manager, Seaboard department; Dr. S. J. Rozier Biggs, J. Lester Brooks, and Irving Brotman, Washington medical examiners for the company, Richard Borwick, and Frank Waldrop. The representatives whose efforts realized the new department are Dumont Beerbower, Allison Chapin, Carleton Edwards, Lawrence Franklin, Howard Fulwiler, Miller Gieseking, Sydney Kaufman, Frank Marshall, Rose Morow, Nelson Oliver, Russel Shelk and Mr. Stephens.

Hagerstown Loan Election

Hagerstown Industrial Savings & Loan Co. reports that at a recent stockholders' meeting the following directors were elected: Samuel C. Barnes, George F. Bell, M. W. Bohrer, Andrew K. Coffman, Ira Downey, C. M. Eisels, Hugh S. George, Dr. M. D. Gilmer, D. W. Groh, jr., W. C. Goeting, Omer T. Kaylor, Harry E. Keedy, Dr. L. K. Leatherman, Emmert M. Lowry, E. W. Miller, D. Earl Neikirk, Dr. Harry B. Shaw, Daniel A. Thomas, Mrs. I. M. Wertz, Jesse P. Weybright, Charles R. Wilson and A. D. Herbert. The directors organized by re-electing as officers: Andrew K. Coffman, president; M. W. Bohrer and D. A. Thomas, vice presidents; D. Earl Neikirk, secretary-treasurer and general manager. Omer T. Kaylor was retained as general counsel. A newly elected officer is Harold G. Pryor, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer. The president reported a very good year.

Fenner & Beane Survey

Building activity continues to be one of the most encouraging elements in the business outlook, in the opinion of the F. & B. Industries service, monthly analysis of 23 leading industrial groups, published by Fenner & Beane, New York Stock Exchange firm.

With a large volume of 1938 building contracts still to be translated into actual shipment of materials, the outlook for further gains in the building supply industry in 1939 is favorable, the study states. Furthermore, most of the building trade factors which helped to produce the notable 1938 performance are fundamental in character and should continue to operate as efficiently in 1939, the report believes.

Accidents Increase With Business Rise

Chicago, Jan. 16. — Business showed a further increase in activity during December and is now at the highest level since September, 1937, according to the index of industrial accidents maintained by the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. and the American Motorists Insurance Co., Chicago carriers under the management of James S. Kemper.

This index, which directly reflects increases or decreases in employment, declined steadily from September, 1937, to July, 1938. In August the trend was reversed and in spite of a temporary setback due to the hurricane and floods in New England, all 1938 losses have been recovered and the trend continues upward.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Sharply restricted receipts lifted hog prices 15 to 25 cents over Friday's average today. The cattle market was largely steady to weak and fat lambs were 15 to 25 cents higher. Hog receipts today totaled 16,000, including directs to packers, and were 14,000 less than advance estimates. Strictly good and choice steers and yearlings were steady, but other grades were weak. The fat lamb market was active and prices were as much as 25 cents up. Sheep were steady.

(U. S. Dept. Agr.)—HOGS—Receipts, 16,000; active; 15 to 25 cents higher than Friday's average; 7.85 top; good and choice 160-220 pound averages, 7.60@7.80; 230-265 pound averages, 7.25@7.50; 270-310 pound butchers, 7.00@7.15; good 350-500 pound packing sows, 6.25@6.60, few lightweights to 6.75.

CATTLE—Receipts, 13,000; calves, 1,500; strictly good and choice steers and yearlings steady; other grades weak; largely short run, with comparative short-feds predominating; prime offerings absent; largely 9.00@12.00 market, with most interests going slow, yet numerous loads sold at 10.00@10.25; best, 12.75; heifers, steady to weak; cows, weak; bulls, weak to 25 cents under last week's high time, with 7.00 practical top on heavy sausage offerings; vealers with weight sold sparingly up to 11.00, mostly 10.00 down; stockers and feeders scarce; Montana, scaling 800 pounds, selling to country at 9.00@9.25; cutter cows, 4.50@5.50; fat cows, 6.00@7.00.

SHEEP—Receipts, 12,000; fat lambs, active; 15 to 25 cents higher; bulk, 9.15@9.25; sheep, steady; bulk choice fed Western ewes, 4.60.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 16.—The stock market started the week with a steady tone today following a firmer trend in Wall Street Saturday. Industrial shares, coppers and other base metals sold higher and home rails were firm. British silkedsed funds and transatlantics held steady. A sharp setback took place in Chinese bonds and Japanese liens also reacted.

Paris—Banking shares and the international group were active and firm in the bourse today. Bank of France gained about 300 francs. Suez Canal moved up 150 and Royal Dutch about 50. Rentes finished 10c centimes lower to 17c up.

Liverpool—Wheat futures moved irregularly today to close ¼d higher to ¼d lower. Cash demand was limited and weekly world shipments heavy, accounting in part for some selling. Scattered selling in cotton futures reflected disappointing Bombay cables and final prices were 1 to 4 points down.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Jan. 16 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Late sales of domestic wools in the Boston market at the week-end comprised some fine territory wools and also ⅜ and ¼ blood trade. Prices were fully firm compared with sales closed earlier in the week. Original bags fine territory wools brought 68 to 69 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing lengths and 67 to 68 cents for average to short French combings. Prices ranged mostly 60 to 62 cents, scoured basis, for combing ⅜-blood and 55 to 57 for combing ¼-blood territory wool. Buyers on today were showing some further interest in wool.

CHEESE—Receipts, 98,128; easy. State, whole milk flats, held, 1937, 20@22; fresh fancy, 18@18½.

RAW SUGAR was quiet and unchanged at 2.95 nominal for duty paid Cubas. Refined held within a range of 4.25 to 4.30. Trade buying strengthened domestic sugar futures today as private reports indicated resumption of negotiations concerning possible change in the tariff on Cuban sugars. Hedging caused erratic price movements around midday, but offerings were easily absorbed and the contract held gains of 2 to 3 points with March at 1.91 and July 1.99.

COFFEE—Spot steady; Rio No. 7, 5¼; Santos No. 4, 7½@8. Cost and freight offerings included Santos bourbon 3s and 4s at 7.30@7.40, Rio No. 7 "A" futures closed 1-3 lower. Sales, 1,000 bags, all switches. Santos No. 4 futures closed 1-3 lower. Sales, 3,250 bags.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

An intensely interesting letter comes from Sir Derrick Wernher, expert bridge player and one of the directors of the American Contract Bridge League, concerning the article recently published on the bidding theories of the late Wilbur C. Whitehead.

In the article we quoted from Whitey's book, written in 1928, in which he said that suction and contract were basically the same and that he advocated the use of the light opening bid in both.

We also gave a hand recently played by Oswald Jacoby in which he made use of the light opening bid, and explained that he, too, believed in attacking at once.

Sir Derrick, as some of you may know, is chief exponent of the Sims method of sandbagging, bidding heavy and doubling light, and coauthor of several Sims books. It is not surprising that he disagrees with the Whitehead ideas, and we appreciate his interest in presenting his arguments so that bridge players may hear both sides of the story.

"I can add something to your observations on Whitey's theories of contract bidding as discussed in your article.

"A few days before he sailed on the voyage which ended in his death he spent the week-end at Hal Sims' house, at Deal, N. J., and we played a little and talked a great amount of contract theory.

"On that Sunday night the talk became very intense, so much so that there was no play, but the three of us, Hal, Whitey and myself, sat up until 4 a. m. discussing bidding theory and displaying and changing hands to illustrate our points.

"We both felt that Whitey had committed himself to a basic error in publishing the paragraphs you quoted, and we wanted him to go over the matter at leisure while on the trip, so that he might publish a further book on contract worthy to stand beside his 'Auction Bridge Standards,' the undisputed masterwork on that game.

"We stressed the fact that, though the mechanics of the play may be common to both games, the strategy and therefore also the tactics of the bidding are quite different.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable

WEST DEALER

	♠ K 8 6 4 3 ♡ K 10 7 5 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ 5
♠ 7 ♡ A Q J 8 4 ◇ K 10 6 ♣ A 9 7	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 2 ♡ 9 6 2 ◇ Q J 8 5 4 3 ♣ Q 10 8
	♠ A Q J 10 9 5 ♡ None ◇ A 7 ♣ K 6 4 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	1NT	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: A ♡.

Perhaps what Sir Derrick means can be more clearly shown in the explanation of today's hand. It was submitted to us by a young bridge enthusiast who wanted to know how to arrive at six spades on the North-South cards. A quick glance revealed that six could not be made with a diamond opening and therefore it should not be bid.

We pointed this out to the young man who replied, "Well, but I got a heart opening and it was easy."

"You may have made six," we answered, "but I can't recommend bidding it since it cannot be made against good defense."

"But would you bid it—in duplicate?" the young man insisted.

"Possibly, if I had a bad score and had nothing to lose, but I certainly would not bid a doubtful slam with a good or 'average' score. It would be a needless risk."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

FROM a WPA administrative employe: "What we're sore about is simple to understand. We wanted civil service status, and we never were interested in perpetuating the WPA. The Congress knows as well as anyone that giving WPA administrative employes civil service status would not perpetuate the WPA. The WPA is gone any time Congress cuts off the appropriation. They didn't want to bring any more people under civil service; they didn't want to cut down on their field of political plums. And they talk about politics!"

THE Civil Service Commission, which recently was asked by someone about examinations for a "fish watcher" in Alaska, also has been asked to have an examination for men to oversee the loading of burros on Federal preserves in the West. And this with the commission already swamped by applications, the number reaching more than 450,000 between July and December, 1938. It was a record for a six-months' period.

Again concerning the commission: It recently held an examination, rating the applicants on both mental tests and experience. One applicant received a final rating of 20.75. She wrote in immediately, saying that she assumed she had received a rating of 20 on the mental test and 75 on experience. Of course, she had overlooked the decimal point.

ELLEN MAKI (Postoffice Department), "Miss Civil Service," will be introduced at a grand ball to be given Saturday evening in the Kennedy-Warren Hotel by the American Federation of Government Employes. Honor guests with her will be the three Civil Service Commissioners. On the general arrangements committee are: Duke Strople, chairman; Edward J. McGinnis (AGO); Harry Rader (St. Elizabeths); Vinnie Harrington (Bureau of Engraving); Josephine McNulty (Navy); Margaret Wilbar (Tariff Commission); Sophie Weber (Treasury); Mary Becker (Treasury, Disbursing); Ryland A. Babb (Internal Revenue); Edna Murphy (Land Office); Katherin Shilling (Civil Service); Marion Caswell (Employes' Compensation); Lottie Thompson (GAO); Regina Doyle (Veterans); Earl C. Thom (Weather Bureau); Ida Hines (Mail Equipment); Rozella G. Robey (Public Health); Albert Novak (Internal Revenue); John Lane (Railroad Retirement); Charles Sharkey (Labor); Thomas W. Mitchell (Federal Trade); Charles B. Buck (District Government); Walter Disbrow (Navy Yard), and J. R. Ruiz, (Public Roads).

THE FCA has created a co-operative research and service division, headed by Tom G. Stitts, by transferring some of the work heretofore done in the co-operative bank division. Comments Gov. F. F. Hill: "In addition, we are considering recommending to the 12 regional banks for co-operatives that they employ co-operative business specialists who will work primarily with co-operatives which have borrowed from the banks or with those which apply for loans but for one reason or another cannot qualify." The activities of these co-operative business specialists will not detract from the strength and activities of the co-operative division "but will tend to make its findings and knowledge more widely available."

NOTES: Tonight's top events—The dance of the Virginia State Society at the Willard Hotel, and the dance of the Mississippi State Society at the Wardman Park Hotel. For the Virginians it is Lee-Jackson night; for the Mississippians, Congressional night. At the Mississippi affair, the dancers will be led in the Lambeth walk by dancers from the Arthur Murray studio . . . Incidentally, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, recently elected member of the SSB, is serving again as president of the Mississippi group . . . William R. Hall, project manager, Chopawamsic (the Indians called it "at a small isolated lodge") Recreational Demonstration Area, will talk on "The Chopawamsic Recreational Demonstrational Area and Its Program of Organized Camping," in the Departmental Auditorium (Constitution avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets), at 8 tomorrow evening. The camp, 35 miles southwest of Washington, was established to afford recreation and rest to lower income groups in the Nation's Capital and its environs. It can accommodate 1,600 persons a season and is a 14,000-acre beautyland, wooded and rolling.

Bob Burns Says—

I see where a guy's conscience got to troublin' him so much that he put a brand-new thousand dollar bill in an envelope an' mailed it to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, askin' him to add it to Uncle Sam's "Conscience Fund." Of course, the bird didn't sign his name to the letter. His conscience wasn't troublin' him that bad.

But, say—did you know how much money our Government's got in the Conscience Fund already? Well, fasten a good rubber band around your pocketbook an' watch your own conscience—she totals over $640,000! Boy, at this rate, if Uncle Sam could only hit on a scheme to get everybody's conscience a botherin' 'em, we could balance the budget over night an' do away with taxation!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

What Zip Dug Up

It was at the home of the Old Naturalist that the Captain, veteran of the World War and now an officer of the National Guard, stated that the bravest deed he ever witnessed was the act of a Mouse.

"Do you mean that you really and truly believe that what you saw a Mouse do was braver than anything you saw done during the war?" asked Sue.

"Aw," said Sammy, "no Mouse could be that brave."

"Tell us about it. Please do," begged Sue.

"All right. I'll do that and leave you to judge for yourselves as to the bravery of that Mouse," agreed the Captain. "There is a Dog in the story, too."

"Whose?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Mine," replied the Captain. "His name is Zip and he is what is called a Beagle, a kind of small hound used for hunting Rabbits. Had it not been for Zip there would be no story."

"Is the story true?" asked Farmer Brown's boy.

"True in every detail," replied the Captain. "Last summer I went into camp with the National Guard down on Cape Cod. My tent was a small officer's tent with a board floor. Zip was with me, for he is the company mascot, and we occupied the tent together. You see, Zip is quite a favorite among the soldiers.

"When the time came for breaking camp some of the men came to tear up the floor of my tent. It was then that a Meadow Mouse ran out from under it. One of the men tried to hit her with his hammer and missed. Then as she ran out of the tent, the other man threw his hammer at her. He also missed. Imagine how that little Mouse must have felt with two huge giants trying to kill her.

"The floor was finally torn up and taken away and I went back into my tent to read. Presently I noticed that Zip was interested in something. He was sniffing about at a certain spot and his ears were set a trifle forward as a Dog's ears are when he is interested in something. I paid him no special attention, not even when he began to dig. It wasn't until I thought I heard a faint squeak. It was very faint and I wasn't sure. Then I looked to see what Zip was about.

"I found that he had dug up a nest, the nest of the Mouse we had seen run out when the floor was being torn up. Zip hadn't had to dig far to get it. You know a Meadow Mouse, also called Field Mouse, sometimes makes a nest on the surface of the ground in a place where it can be well hidden, but more often digs a place for it just a little under the surface, and Zip had discovered where it was and had dug it out.

"I at once discovered that there had been several helpless baby Mice in that nest and it was one of these that I had heard squeak. They were scattered about on the ground. I gathered them up and placed them back in the nest, carefully covering them with dry grass.

"All the time I talked to Zip. I told him that he, a Rabbit Hound, should be ashamed of himself for digging up these helpless little Mice and that I was ashamed of him. I told him in plain English to leave those Mice alone. He may not have understood the words but there is no doubt that he understood my meaning. He looked as if he felt a little foolish over having been detected with such small game, sighed and stretched out right beside that nest and went to sleep, or pretended to. To this day I am not certain as to which he did. Not once did he offer to disobey.

"I don't see anything very brave about that," said Sammy.

U. S. Students Pledge Faith in Americanism

Indict Totalitarians As Social Wreckers; Vow Fight on Isms

The document, modeled on the Declaration of Independence, bears the signatures of 63 leading citizens.

The National Student Federation represents the student councils of a large number of colleges and universities. The "Re-declaration," initiated by Dorothy Thompson, Herbert Agar and Hamilton Fish Armstrong, was officially adopted by the federation in December. A Nation-wide movement to obtain several million signatures is planned.

Many Famous Signers

Among signers to the document were Maxwell Anderson, playwright; James Truslow Adams, author; Heywood Broun, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt; Marc Connelly, playwright; Dr. Walter Damrosch, Jonathan Daniels, editor; John W. Davis, D. M. Emery, president, National Small Businessmen's Association; Edna Ferber, author; Marshall Field 3d, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Frank Porter Graham, president, University of North Carolina; William Green, president, American Federation of Labor; John Gunther, author; H. G. Hatfield, president, Kiwanis International; Alvin S. Johnson, Hugh S. Johnson, H. V. Kaltenborn, Herbert H. Lehman, Frederic March, actor; Edna St. Vincent Millay, Mrs. Ruth Haller Ottaway, president, National Council of Women; Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Robert E. Sherwood, playwright; Alfred E. Smith, Charles P. Taft, attorney; Dorothy Thompson, the right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop, Protestant Episcopal Church; William Allen White, Alexander Woolcott, and Walter White, president, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Text of Declaration

"When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for a people to reaffirm the faith by which for 163 years they have lived as a nation, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to do so. . . .

"The challenge has not come from us. But since it has come, we accept it. Great has been the patient sufferance of democracies. And great is now the necessity which constrains us to protest against repeated injuries suffered from the foes of the democratic faith.

"They have defamed our institutions and held them up to ridicule, as weak, corrupt and decadent.

"They have sent agents among us to disrupt the solidarity of our citizenship.

"They have laid blood claims and class claims upon groups of our citizens and sought to detach them from us and turn them into instruments of their own . . .

Appeasement Balked

"They have desecrated the churches of our religion and imprisoned their ministers and priests . . .

"They have substituted for our oft frustrated, but ever renewed efforts at peace and good will, the glorification of war . . .

"They have persecuted the weak and helpless and exploited our sympathy for the oppressed, holding a people for ransom and demanding tribute for their release.

"They have taken the property of our citizens and used it to help finance an economic war against us . . .

"We, therefore, appealing to the citizens of all democracies and to the silenced millions in the countries from which the menace comes, denounce these practices . . .

"We declare that to keep alive these truths that are the sense and substance of our being, we pledge our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

D. C. Relief Body To Drop Chiselers

Relief chiselers will be dropped from the rolls as rapidly as they are detected, Elwood Street, welfare director, declared yesterday in comment on allegations by Burdette Lewis, relief investigator, that more than 100 persons are now obtaining relief and old-age assistance here by fraudulent means.

Street pointed out that his office had not been furnished specific information on the cases cited in the Lewis report.

Synchronous Station Permit Sought Here

Metropolitan Police's Youngest Captain Takes Oath

Floyd A. Truscott (seated) yesterday was sworn in as police captain, the youngest in years and point of service ever to hold that office here. He is 40 and has been a policeman 14 years. Capt. Truscott, who smashed the Tri-State gang and solved an important murder, succeeds the late Capt. Ira Sheetz. Members of the Tenth Precinct (above) presented him with flowers. Standing (from left) are Private Anthony Richitt, Lieut. Lawrence Beall and Lieut. John T. Whittstatt.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents her 108th Musical Morning on Monday in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Artists: Elen Dosia, soprano (Frederick Schauwecker, accompanist); Emile Baume, pianist; Gasper Cassado, violoncellist (Hans Horwitz, accompanist).

Two artists distinguished elsewhere made their local debuts at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's Musical Morning yesterday when Elen Dosia, Greek soprano, and Emile Baume, French pianist, shared a program with Gaspar Cassado, Spanish violoncellist, who has been profitably heard here before. With three participants, not counting the accompanists, the recital was kaleidoscopic in its changes of tone color.

Coming to us with the reclame of the Opera Comique in Paris and the Chicago Opera, Mme. Dosia disclosed qualities which would account for her success in roles requiring piquancy of personality. Temperamentally vivacious and endowed with a dark beauty, she has a winsome charm which prejudices an audience in her favor before she opens her mouth. Her lyric voice, well trained and equably produced, has warmth in its tone and facility in its phrasing.

She was quite at home in Manon's aria, "Je suis encore tout etourdie," wherein coquetry had its sway, and her interpretative refinement was pleasing in Duprac's "Chanson triste" and Gabriel Faure's "Le papillon et la fleur." In her readings of two songs of her native land, Spathy's "To Layarmi" and Petrides' "Serenade," there was a haunting wistfulness which made one wish that she had elected to sing more of them.

There was a disappointing lack of dramatic force, however, in her performance of "Vissi d'arte," which is an aria unsuited to her voice, bringing out a hardness of tone. She would do well to confine herself for the present to pure lyricism, and also to cultivate more repose of manner.

Emile Baume is a masterful pianist with a technique which does not bother him in the least, so sure is the bond between his intention and his performance. His first offering was Busoni's amplification of the Bach chorale-prelude, "In Dir ist Freude," which exhibited his dynamic resources. His affinity for the music of Chopin was evident in his sensitive readings of the D flat Nocturne, the G sharp minor and G flat Etudes and the B minor Scherzo. His closing group contained Albeniz's "Navarra" and two pieces by Skryabin: an unspecified "Poeme" and the twelfth Etude from Opus 8.

For some reason, Gaspar Cassado chose to play only transcriptions and arrangements. His major offering, Beethoven's Sonata in F major, Opus 17, was originally written for horn and piano—more specifically for the horn of Johann Stich, known as Punto. His admirable performance of it, however, was full of power and eloquence, and he had an able collaborator in young Hans Horwitz. From the poesy of this reading, marked by a beautifully drawn tone and a concentration upon musical dignity, the descent was rapid to an offhand and showy delivery of a group consisting of Wagner's "Albumblatt," Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song" and a paraphrase on "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Walter Bauer conducts the Agriculture Orchestra Monday evening in the Agriculture Auditorium, in a concert utilizing the women's section of the Symphonic Choir. Program: Vorspiel to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), "The Flight into Egypt" (Bruch), Adagietto from Symphony No. 5 in C minor (Mahler), "Night" (Saint-Saens), "The Lord's Prayer" (Malotte), Symphony No. 1 in D major (Svendsen.)

Silent outside the rehearsal hall since June, the Agriculture Orchestra gave its first concert of the season last evening. Dr. Walter Bauer, pursuing his pleasant hobby of bringing forward unfamiliar music, presented as the major work on the program the D major symphony of Johan Severin Svendsen, the Norwegian composer who died in 1911. He is of the opinion that this symphony had not been previously performed in the United States, and he is probably right. Although Svendsen came to this country in 1870 and returned to Leipzig with an American wife, his compositions are not well known here.

The D major symphony, which bears the opus number four, is characteristically Scandinavian in thematic material and somewhat episodic in its structure. It is for the most part lively music, melodically attractive and colored with nostalgic harmonies. In its faithfulness to folk style, it resembles the music of Grieg, although Svendsen had a more masterly hand in orchestration.

Further unhackneyed works essayed by the organization of amateurs were the adagietto from Gustav Mahler's C minor symphony, Max Bruch's "The Flight Into Egypt" and Saint-Saens' "Night" for soprano solo (Marie Martel), flute solo (Armand Gumprecht), chorus and orchestra. The more interesting of the two compositions in which the orchestra was assisted by the women's section of the Symphonic Choir, was the idyllic nightpiece by the versatile Saint-Saens, whose sense of instrumentation was unerring.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Lost: One British Nobleman Between London and D. C.

Lost—one British nobleman.

A search was on yesterday for Lord Strabolgi, member of His Majesty's loyal opposition in Parliament. Scheduled to speak here before Town Hall Sunday night, he failed to put in an appearance. Town Hall officials said they understood he planned to come to Washington from a lecture at Duke University.

The British Embassy declared ignorance of his whereabouts.

A last-minute report was that he was still in London.

Eccles Challenges Byrd To 'Public' Discussion

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday continued his verbal feud with Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, over New Deal "pump priming" with a statement that the Virginian is seeking to apply "pioneer economics" to a "modern world." He invited Byrd to a "public" discussion of the issue after the Senator on Sunday charged that the spending program violates Democratic campaign platforms and is blocking recovery.

Byrd, in a radio talk last night, again criticized Eccles' views.

Supreme Court Accepts Two Suits Over Gold Clause

By the Associated Press.

Two cases involving interpretation of the 1933 gold clause act were accepted for review yesterday by the Supreme Court.

The question was whether the act which abrogated payment of obligations in gold also eliminated the provision that payments could be required in foreign currencies equivalent to gold dollars.

The Chemical Bank & Trust Co., of New York, acting as trustee under a mortgage of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., sought payment in Dutch guilders of interest on bonds due in 1936. Bethlehem Steel Co. was asked to pay interest on bonds partly in Swiss francs and partly in Dutch guilders.

Jury Indicts Dodd On Hit-Run Charge; Trial Delay Denied

Hanover Courthouse, Va., Jan. 16 (A.P.).—Dr. William E. Dodd, former United States Ambassador to Germany, was indicted by a Hanover County grand jury today on a charge of hit-and-run driving and causing injury to Glois Grimes, 4-year-old colored child. His trial was set for March 2.

Visibly nervous, the 69-year-old statesman entered a plea of innocence when the indictment was read at his formal arraignment. He attempted to explain his plea, but at the repeated insistence of his attorney, Leon M. Bazile, Dr. Dodd took his seat after the plea.

Bazile sought unsuccessfully to have the trial delayed until the next term of court in order that the victim could be in court. However, Commonwealth's Attorney Edward Simpkins, jr., objected strenuously and the court set the trial for March 2.

Manchoukuo to Join Anti-Comintern Pact

Hsinking, Manchoukuo (Tuesday), Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Manchoukuo, Japan's puppet state, formally accepted today an invitation from Italy, Germany and Japan to join the anti-Comintern Pact.

The government soon will sign the pact, which Hungary has announced she would join this week. Their signatures will bring to five the nations bound by the agreement to fight the spread of communism.

Retail Food Prices Show Rise of 1 Per Cent

An advance of 1 per cent in the average retail cost of food between November 15 and December 13 was announced yesterday by Isador Lubin, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The increase was the result of a more than seasonal advance of 7.3 per cent in the price of butter and higher prices for 11 of the 13 fresh fruit and vegetable items covered in the bureau's index," Lubin said.

Degree for Kennedy

London, Jan. 16 (A.P.).—Edinburgh University will confer the honorary degree of doctor of laws on Prime Minister Chamberlain and United States Ambassador Kennedy at a date to be announced later.

Glee Club Balks At Song Lauding German Masters

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 16 (A.P.). Prof. H. R. Pratt, director of the University of Virginia Glee Club, said today members of the glee club had refused to sing praise to "German masters" even though set to Wagner's immortal music.

Prof. Pratt said members of the club demanded a revision of the wording of a line of the finale to the Wagnerian opera, "Die Meistersinger," before they would agree to sing it with the Virginia symphony orchestra in a joint concert at Cabell Hall tomorrow night.

The line objected to, translated, reads: "Honor your German masters," and the score requires all 80 voices to sing it in crescendo.

The club director said he had rewritten the line to read "honor your master singers."

Dominicans Offer Haven

London, Jan. 16 (A.P.).—Negotiations for settlement of 100,000 Jewish refugees from Europe in the Dominican Republic were announced today by the Dominican consul general, Frederick F. Sharles.

Fire Kills 4 in Family
